Banks and Shoestrings
Arabs Own the Wall
Russia Goes Whaling
Mr. Coolidge Will Rest

By Arthur Brisbane

BANK MERGERS in Chicago ow that some big-sized finan- al gentlemen mean to take re of weak sisters and avoid ouble whenever it is possible. en. Dawes, Mr. Traylor of the irst National Bank of Chicago nd George M. Reynolds of the ontinental Illinois National ank are entitled to thanks.

But some way should be found impress on so-called finan- ers that lending money on a oestring, especially when it n't a good shoestring, has its enalties.

The English commission rul- g the Holy Land decides that e "Wailing Wall," sacred to e ancient sorrows of the Jews, the absolute property of the rabs. The commission decides, owever, that the Jews must be llowed to go there and wail, ithout interference.

Historical advisers say that e commission could not decide therwise, since the Arabs have een in possession of the Holy and for some 700 years, ever nce they established the fact at Crusades, like other wars, o not pay and cannot be waged rofitably.

If Russia will kindly pause nd let "conservative business nd finance" get their respectble breaths, business and fi- ance will be much obliged.

Russia is now going into the haling business, has ordered pecial whaling ships, and will evelop new whaling territory. hat is good news for our soap akers, bad news for the hales.

The worst of it is that, while his country, pointing to Russia, ays: "I wouldn't be seen play- ng with that bad little boy," ther countries do play with ussia. For example, the Nor- egian government encourages s citizens to sell goods to Rus- ia, and guarantees 75 per cent f all bills owed by Russia. ther countries do the same.

If a Norwegian sells $100 orth of goods to Russia, and oesn't get his money, his own overnment will pay him $75, nd as he certainly tacks on $25 rofit, he can't lose, and keeps is business going.

Our government is too pure or that. We prefer to send our ublic representatives lally-gag- ing around Europe, talking bout sweet peace, how we love verybody, and how we all ought o give up war. We might bet- er attend to our own business nd develop it.

Mr. Coolidge, who has been riting a short article daily, ex- ept Sundays, for a year, will top in July and rest two onths. He said in one of his rticles: "The brains of the ountry need relaxation and re- reshment more than ever this eason."

Many editors, who have been writing every day, Sundays in- luded, for ten, twenty, thirty, orty years or more, will congratulate Mr. Coolidge on his wise decision, and wish they could imitate it.

Mr. Coolidge's articles, appearing in the Chicago Herald-Examiner, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, and other newspapers throughout the country, have been forceful, sound and useful, and it is good news that he will resume writing them in the fall.

Paris is having a colonial exposition, and once more the Eiffel Tower is taxed to its capacity with visitors.

The French, conservative, at first would only go to the first landing, 190 feet toward the clouds. A few went to the 384 height; few dared brave the third platform, 905 feet high. Now nearly all go to the top, and look over the beautiful city.

Something of the fish and something of the bird makes us want to go to the bottom of the sea, and to high places. And we go.

Once "captive balloons" fastened to the earth with a rope were popular. Sarah Bernhardt went up in one, and was well advertised.

Former Governor Smith's Empire State Building in New York, considerably higher than the Eiffel Tower, actually takes in a thousand dollars a day from visitors to the top.

In a little while school children will take their "geography lesson" going around the world six miles up and think nothing of it.

Rare books valued at $40,000 have been stolen from Widener Memorial Library at Harvard in a stolen book racket that has netted a ring of thieves at least $500,000 a year, the Boston Evening American learned today.

Details of a long statement made to the Boston police and the Boston Evening American by Herbert B. Clarke 29, of New York City, revealed that a clearing house for the stolen works had been organized and is operating in Fourth ave., New York City.

Boston Public Library and the libraries of Yale, Cornell and a number of Western universities were included in those victimized by the ring, Clarke declared.

OFFERED HARVARD AID

Clarke was arrested in a Revere hotel yesterday by Inspectors Liese and O'Neill of the Boston police on a charge of larceny of $2000 worth of books from the public library at Lancaster.

He disclaimed the thefts, but told police he knew of the activities of the ring and was ready to expose its members.

He revealed that at one time he offered his services to Harvard toward the cessation of thievery at

RICH MAN, 82, WEEPS OVER DIVORCE

Boston Millionaire Tells How He Was Abused by Wife Now in Paris

Tears were shed on the witness stand in Suffolk court today by William L. Terhune, 82, millionaire president of the Boston Square and Compass Club, as he was granted a divorce from Leola Benedict Terhune of New York and Washington.

The divorce severed a surprise romance of two years ago and the wedding of the couple in New York.

Terhune's tears flowed during his recital of "a continual tirade of abusive and sarcastic remarks" he said were aimed at him by his 47-year-old wife.

She did not contest the case and Terhune said she was in Paris.

The case was delayed a few minutes when it was discovered the elderly millionaire had no corroborating witness.

LAWYER AS WITNESS

His son-in-law, Edward M. Carpenter of Swampscott, filled the breach by changing from his role as lawyer to witness. Frank Harding, an associate of Carpenter's, was pressed into service as the attorney.

"I met her in Paris after she sent me a letter and said she saw my name on list of arrivals," Terhune testified.

"She inquired if I was the same Terhune that she and her late

HATHAWAY AT DEATH SCENE SHOWS NO EMOTION

Jury Sees Spot Where Nurse's Body Lay, Hears Prosecutor Depict Crime

Tiverton, R. I., June 9—Unmoved, in pouring rain, Elliott Hathaway stood this afternoon in Winward Lane, only a dozen feet from where the body of Verna Russell was found, nearly three months ago. He heard Atty.-Gen. McLyman describe the position of the body. The defense counsel asked the jurymen, who remained in their bus, to note the position of the Albert G. Winward home, and reminded them that the Massachusetts line was only two miles away. After 15 or 20 minutes at the scene, Judge Walsh adjourned court on the spot.

By WIN BROOKS,
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Tiverton, R. I., June 9—To the spot from where he last is alleged to have fled in terror, with the crumpled form of Verna Russell lying in the weeds, Elliott R. Hathaway returned today with the jury that will decide whether he is to spend the rest of his life in prison as the murderer of the girl.

Shackled to a deputy sheriff and guards, Hathaway was taken with the jurors from Newport Courthouse this afternoon for a view of the murder scene in Winward Lane, where Verna Russell's body was found early on March 24.

When last he stood in the windswept lane, it was black night, according to his "pal," Vernon V. Grivin, who is expected to be the State's chief witness—and when Hathaway left the lane and the body, it was to vanish and become a hunted man.

The jury, picked finally and sworn in just before the morning session at Newport courthouse closed, came over the road in a bus to Winward Lane.

MAKE TRIP IN BUS

Accompanying the bus in the car of Deputy Sheriff Frank P. King, was Hathaway. Judge Charles A. Walsh came in the bus with the jurors, and prosecution and defense counsel rode in their own machines.

Before leaving the courthouse for the scene, Judge Walsh gave instructions to the jurors, cautioning them to talk to no one except counsel, and not to talk at all, if possible, on the case.

"A pretty safe rule to follow," he said, "is to keep your eyes and your ears open and your mouth closed when going on views."

George Hurley, one of defense counsel, then asked what route the bus and cars were to follow. Judge Walsh replied that under no cir-

MRS. CALLAN IS GIVEN DIVORCE

Mrs. Mary Hemenway Callan of Wellesley today was granted a decree of divorce from John J. Callan, ning operator and former minister, on grounds of cruel and abusive treatment and "gross and confirmed habits of intoxication."

With the divorce Mrs. Callan was given custody of the couple's three children, John, 7; Mary 4, and Christine, 3.

Mrs. Callan is the daughter of Augustus Hemenway, Boston philanthropist who died recently.

The decree today ended a long and bitter legal battle in which Mrs. Callan accused her husband of constant drunkenness.

The suit was taken under advisement by Judge Joseph E. McCoole a month ago, and was reopened last week to hear further testimony bearing on the custody of the children.

'Playboy' Keen Watcher of Picking of Jurors

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

He evidenced keener interest and displayed active participation in the handling of his case.

"Pinky" sized up the jurors and before the "12 good men and true" were finally selected he personally approved their avowed open mindedness and impartiality with an O. K.

Several times he went into a whispering huddle with his counsel, John Nolan, and with his brother, Dr. Louis E. Hathaway.

Their ears virtually cupped together, they talked on and on, as counsel for both sides were informally conferring with Judge Charles Walsh in his lobby. Dr. Hathaway, with notepaper and pencil in hand, reviewed his jottings with the brother for whose cumstances was the state line to be crossed.

She is survived by her husband and two sons.

This admonition was made, it is believed, to preclude any possibility of a warrant being served on Hathaway in Massachusetts, or any possibility of his claiming that he was beyond the jurisdiction of Rhode Island—and demanding the protection of Massachusetts, which might result in an extradition fight.

It was a dismal scene in the lane where death has laid its hand, the rain falling from a murky sky and blowing inthe faces of Hathaway, the jurors and counsel, all of whom snuggled into their upturned coat collars.

This jury that will decide Hathaway's fate is made up exclusively of men, middle-aged and elderly, with one exception.

Its foreman is Ernest R. Fish, a Tiverton farmer who once employed a brother of Verna E. Russell, whom Hathaway, Fall River playboy, 28-year-old son of a Massachusetts legislator, is accused of strangling to death at Tiverton, March 23.

Mrs. Maybelle A. Thayer, Little Compton housewife, tentatively seated yesterday, was ousted by a state challenge.

That was the only government challenge. No other women were drawn today.

The defense utilized three of its five challenges. Hathaway unsmiling, a symphony in blue, took an active part in selection of the jury, conferring at times with each of the three attorneys striving to save him from life imprisonment at hard labor for the murder of his pretty student nurse girl friend.

The jury was completed at 12:30 p. m. after a day and half which saw 26 talesmen called.

JURY SWORN IN

Fish was appointed foreman, the jury was sworn by Clerk Sydney Harvey and warned by Judge Charles A. Walsh, veteran criminal jurist presiding, not to talk about the case with any one—not even among themselves, until all evidence is completed.

This jury that will decide the fate of Hathaway in one of Rhode Island's most important criminal cases, was chosen with comparative ease in a county where, his counsel had claimed, there was bias and prejudice against him.

It is a representative cross-section of life in the community where Verna A. Russell attended and graduated from high school, embarking later upon a nursing profession at the Truesdale Hospital in Fall River, from which, with Hathaway, the government contends, that she started on her fatal ride.

WOMAN IS OUSTED

It is composed of two farmers, two contractors, a painter, a plumber, a carpenter, a fisherman, a wharf builder, a retired navy man, a bleachery folder, a meter reader.

All, with the exception of the meter reader, Paul Abbott, are men of middle age or over. Abbott is in his early 30s.

Four live in Tiverton, where Verna's body was found. Two, Foreman Fish and Ellwood H. Monroe, a fisherman, live in Portsmouth, Verna's home town.

Mrs. Thayer, the diminutive housewife who, it appeared might be the only woman on the jury, left the court with a pleasant smile when the government challenged her.

She had indicated under questioning yesterday that she was somewhat opposed to conviction by circumstantial evidence, on which the state's case is based, but she believed she could return a fair verdict after listening to Judge Walsh's instructions and rulings on law.

Only two of 13 women on the venire of 121 talesmen were called. The other tentatively seated yesterday, was excused when the court learned she was to become a mother.

NEGRO ON PANEL

The defense challenges were used to oust from the jury box Alexander H. Stewart, Middletown dairyman; William H. Jackson, Negro doorkeeper at the House of Representatives, and William L. Peckham, a Tiverton dairy farmer who was seated only today, taking Mrs. Thayer's place.

It was 11:25 when Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman announced to the court: "The jury as presently constituted is satisfactory to the state." Atty. George Hurley of the defense stated "a minute more." He conferred with Hathaway and with his associate, John Nolan. Hathaway glanced across the room at the jury box. He turned to Hurley.

"The jury is saitsfactory to the defense," announced the former assistant Attorney-General.

3000 WATCH IN RAIN

A crowd of 3000 persons, many of them bareheaded girls, stood in a driving rain to catch a glimpse of the defendant. There was a silence as Sergt. Joseph Merceau and two troopers opened a pathway through the throng and Hathaway, covering his face with his hat as usual, dashed up the stairs.

He was taken at once to court. He wore the new blue suit and blue tie in which he appeared yesterday. He was pale.

For a time he was alone within the bar enclosure at the table of his counsel, but shortly afterward Russell entered and took a seat nearer the defendant than that he occupied yesterday.

Hathaway's back was turned to the father of his dead girl friend. He did not turn around.

Defense Counsel George Hurley, John Nolan and Samuel I. Jacobs were followed into the courtroom by Atty.-Gen. Benjamin M. McLyman and his assistant, John Day. Asst. Atty.-Gen. Sigmund W. Fischer, Jr., did not appear.

Judge Walsh had conferred with some members of the press before the opening of court and a corps of artists were permitted to occupy a spare jury box near the front of the courtroom.

The courtroom was dark despite four great north windows, and the lights were snapped on.

CALLS CONFERENCE

Atty. Nolan and the Attorney-General conferred for five minutes at the latter's desk and McLyman arose to address the court.

"If Your Honor please, the defense has raised a question under the statutes with reference to a jury and we feel an informal discussion might clear the situation."

"Very well," said court, "you may come into chambers."

Judge Walsh, the two prosecuting attorneys and the trio of defense lawyers filed out.

Atty. Hurley came from the conference room in 10 minutes, secured two brief cases and returned.

Dr. Louis E. Hathaway, Jr., moved down from his spectators' chair to talk with his brother, drawing up a chair behind the defendant. They talked in low voices for more than a quarter of an hour.

Forty minutes after the mystery conference began, Attorney Hurley again came from the chambers and secured a book from the law library at the desk of Clerk Sydney Harvey.

HATHAWAY IS A KEEN WATCHER

freedom from life imprisonment he has been so desperately fighting.

And the "playboy" had his say.

"I doubt if I can give this defendant a fair trial," Joseph D. Moffitt, Highland rd., Tiverton grocer, told the court.

Quickly the defendant leaned over to his counsel and whispered something. Moffitt was not accepted.

Mrs. Louis E. Hathaway, who yesterday spent her son's birthday in court at what promises to be one of the most dramatic murder trials this historic town has ever witnessed, today was absent from the session.

Her husband and Dr. Hathaway were there, occupying the same seats not far from that in which was silently sitting a big man, a Westerner, the father of Verna E. Russell.

Occasionally they conversed softly, father and brother of the accused slayer of the Truesdale Hospital nurse, but never once did they glance in the direction of the girl's father.

They watched Hathaway and he watched the selection of jurors.

HE MISSES NOTHING

A hush of absolute silence fell over the courtroom as the 12 men finally picked after a day and a half of interrogation were asked to stand by Judge Walsh and were sworn in.

Young Hathaway watched them intently, as, hands upraised, they said their "I do's" to the court oath of truthful service.

He missed nothing as he directed his glances over all parts of the courtroom.

And then he turned, motioned to his brother, the doctor, and they went into a huddle.

Dr. Hathaway pulled out his notes, showed them to his brother and quietly discussed the jury selection. The doctor's advice was sought by the boy's counsel throughout the session, and what he suggested was relayed to young Hathaway.

Briskly, with precision and determination, he walked to his chair sat down and waited.

LOST IN REVERIE

For a moment the playboy was lost in reverie. He didn't stand up so quickly, and Samuel Jacobs, associate in the array of legal talent employed for his defense, was obliged to nudge him.

Hathaway jumped to his feet at attention as the "hear ye, hear ye," that continues on in the opening of court session, brought those in attendance to full attention and quiet.

"God Save the State of Rhode Island and the Providence Plantation."

Early Arrivals Only Have Chance to Get Courtroom Seat

By Staff Correspondent

Newport, R. I., June 9—The "first come first served" ruling will prevail at tomorrow's session of the Hathaway murder trial.

Early arrivals only will have a chance to get a seat.

No one will be allowed in the courtroom until Judge Charles Walsh has taken the bench.

Judge Walsh is to see first how many available seats there are after witnesses and newspaper representatives have taken their places.

He will limit the number of spectators to the remaining number of seats, instruct the court officers as to the seating capacity and begin his court after spectators have been admitted.

TRIAL GRIEVES TWO MOTHERS

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Newport, R. I., June 9—The progress of justice was reported to two mothers, but from different angles.

Mrs. Louise Hathaway, mother of the accused Elliott, talked over with members of the family the first day's activities of "Pinky's" trial on a murder charge.

In a cottage by the sea in Bristol Ferry rd., Portsmouth, a saddened father related court details to his bereft wife.

SHUNS ORDEAL

Not to attend court sessions because the ordeal is too bitter, Mrs. Carl Russell, the slain Verna's mother, will be informed by her husband of the state's attempt to put behind prison bars for life Elliott R. Hathaway.

But Mrs. Hathaway is to attend all the sessions. She isn't to miss a word of the mighty battle that is to be in progress for the next few weeks in this picturesque town, the battle of the state against her boy.

MRS. RUSSELL YOUNGER

A difference in ages exists between the two mothers. Mrs. Russell is a younger woman. Mrs. Russell is still under the strain of sorrow. Verna, her only daughter, murdered in a lonely lane last March, is still with her in spirit. She was to have been graduated from Truesdale Hospital this month. She was to have achieved the first step in a career of medicine that presaged brilliance and recognition.

Mrs. Russell can't forget the graduation exercises she was to have attended as a proud and happy mother.

Mrs. Hathaway is a victim of suspense, that horrible fourth degree that carries with it heartaches and uncertainty.

Woman 'Juror' Goes Back to Husband, Pots and Pans

By Staff Correspondent

Newport, R. I., June 9—"The lone woman" in the Hathaway jury box went home today, excused from service by the court on the challenge of the government.

She went home to her husband in Sakonnet Point, Little Compton.

Tentatively selected yesterday, Mrs. Maybelle A. Thayer today was dismissed after spending the night at the Hotel Vicking.

Waiting for her outside the court building was her husband, who yesterday drove her to court and assured himself of her comfort before returning alone to their little cottage.

The first woman to be prospectively picked and the only woman retained until today, Mrs. Thayer was second to be excused from jury service.

She told the attorney general handling the prosecution of the murder indictment against playboy Hathaway that she had "conscientious scruples" about circumstantial evidence.

Her dismissal today prevented her exercising those scruples had she seen fit to do so.

As quiet, as charming as she was when selected for possible jury service, today she really smiled as her qualifications for adequately serving the State of Rhode Island in its serious business of murder conviction was doubted and denied.

RE[illegible]THAWAY DR. HATHAWAY

MRS. HATHAWAY ALDEN HATHAWAY

Mrs. Hathaway, mother of the prisoner, also took her place in the little courtroom as the drawing got underway of the jurors who will decide her son's fate. Alden, the twin brother of Elliott Hathaway, who also marked his 28th birthday anniversary, was an interested spectator, too, as the battle got well launched. (Staff photos.)

OFFICER SLAIN BY BANDITS

New York, June 9 (AP)—Sergt. William H. O'Shaughnessy, on the force for 35 years, was killed in a Harlem cafe when he interrupted two Negroes, who had lined 30 patrons against a wall and were robbing them.

Four bullets hit O'Shaughnessy. The robbers dashed out, stole a taxi and drove off. Other taxicab drivers took up the chase, picked up several policemen and caught up with the gunmen. In the exchange of shots, Patrolman Edward Ledden was wounded in the jaw, but he managed to wound and capture the Negroes.

Several blocks away, Detective Ernest Rice, 24, walked into a restaurant hold-up and shot it out with the two gunmen. His wrist was fractured by a bullet, but he shot both marauders and captured one.

BELIEVES GIRL IS VICTIM OF FOUL PLAY

Frank W. Wyman Is Going to New York to Probe Long Beach (L. I.) Mystery

Frank W. Wyman, 2d, Boston capitalist and Harvard 1906 graduate, identified himself today as the father of Miss Starr Wyman, 25, former Brookline beauty, whose bruised and scantily-clad body was washed ashore at Long Beach, L. I., late yesterday.

He was found by the Boston Evening American, and announced that he planned to go to New York at once to demand an investigation.

Wyman, director of the Maine Lakes Corp. and other corporations, declared that his daughter was not the type to commit suicide and said he believed she was the victim of foul play.

He said he had not seen his daughter since his wife, now Mrs. Stanley E. Faithfull of New York had divorced him in 1924.

"Starr was a vivacious and happy girl when she left Boston," he said. "I was dumbfounded to learn that her stepfather had identified the body as that of the elder of my two daughters. I shall extend my sympathy to my former wife, for whom I still hold the greatest respect and admiration."

ATTENDED ROGERS HALL

The medical examiner at Long Beach reported that Miss Wyman died from a ruptured liver due to a violent blow on her side.

Starr Wyman attended Brookline high school and the exclusive Rogers Hall school at Lowell.

A New York report that Miss Wyman was acquainted with Catherine Hill, missing at Provincetown, and Elizabeth Wardwell, missing at Watertown, N. Y., proved to be unfounded.

The records at Dedham court house show that Mrs. Helen McGregor Wyman, then of Brookline, was awarded a divorce from Frank W. Wyman, 2d, on April 26, 1924, for desertion. They were married

ELY WILL SIGN OLD AGE BILL

Governor Ely today said he would sign the bill which was passed by the Legislature to finance the old age assistance act. The bill calls for a $1 increase in poll taxes on men and will provide the State's share of one-third of the amount to be raised to care for the needy aged.

The Governor said he would send back to the Legislature the bill dealing with congressional redistricting. He said he would ask that the Cambridge district of Congressman F. W. Dallinger be combined with the Somerville district represented by Congressman C. L. Underhill instead of a merger of the Luce-Dallinger district. It is expected both branches of the Legislature will reject the Governor's proposal.

On the heels of the Senate action today in rejecting two railroad bills, the Governor will send to the Legislature a special message recommending that a special commission be created to study the situation during recess.

Campbell made public his charges which included correspondence between himself, President Hoover and Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury.

In a statement today Campbell said:

"I have waited before taking action myself in the hope that some of the ardent prohibitionists, whom it might be supposed desired rigid enforcement, would press for an investigation.

"However, as this had not happened, I decided to make the charges against Seymour Lowman myself, and so filed with the President on May 7 last eight specific charges which I said I was prepared to prove."

WORLD REVIVES, SAYS WILBUR

Secretary Wilbur told the graduating class at Massachusetts Institute of Technology today that civilization is in a state of convalescence and "reaching out for some one to help us get back on both feet and at the job again."

Taking "slide rule civilization" as the topic of his commencement address, the interior secretary said the economists and psychologists of the present day have been confused by the speed of modern life and the spread of the economic illness all over the globe.

"But the constitution built for civilization by science acting through agriculture and industry is a good one," he said. "It retains its fundamental capacities to support us as well as to permit further growth.

"One of our greatest problems is to train experts and to learn to depend upon them.

"When I watch some of those who have fixed opinions as to just what we should do in handling our problems of organization, government and civilization and are able to write attractively and plausibly about it, I wonder if they have done the basic work upon which sound social engineering stands, or, in fact, whether anyone has yet done it."

5 DAYS, BERLIN TO SHANGHAI

Berlin, June 9 (INS)—Mail will take only five and a half days, mostly by air, from Berlin to Shanghai, beginning this month.

From Berlin to Moscow the service is run by the "Deruluft," a Russo-German company. From there Soviet planes carry the mail to Tchita. From Tchita to Manchuli on the Chinese border the mail goes by train.

At Manchuli, the mail is taken over by the planes of the newly-founded "Eurasia" company, which fly via Dolon-Nor, Peking, Tientsin to Shanghai. The "Eurasia" is managed on a joint basis by the German Lufthansa and the Chinese Ministry of Transportation.

GERMANS HOPE FOR U. S. AID

S. S. Europa, by Radiophone to London, June 9 (AP)—Chancellor Heinrich Bruening and Dr. Julius Curtius, Germany's foreign minister, homeward bound from England, today were thinking not only of their week-end conference in Chequers with the heads of the British Government, but also of the impending European visits of U. S. Secretaries Henry L. Stimson and Andrew W. Mellon.

They have let it be known they would welcome an opportunity to discuss with Stimson the world's economic situation in the same friendly spirit which permeated the conference as Chequers.

On the other hand, they feel some apprehension lest the American Secretary of State might be forced into the position of acting as a sort of father confessor into whose ears all Europe pours its tale of woe in the hope that he can remold American public opinion with a view to revision or even cancellation of the war debts.

The German statesmen were immensely pleased at reports of United States Senator Borah's attitude regarding reparations, an attitude which they interpreted as indicating a sympathetic understanding of Germany's situation.

The bullet went through Diello's back and through one of the kidneys, Dr. Foulkes said.

Search of an automobile abandoned by Diello before the shooting revealed 20 cases of Canadian ale, customs patrolmen said.

ENVOY IS SENT TO PARLEY AT VATICAN

Pontiff Then Goes Into Conference; Note Said to Be Conciliatory in Tone

Rome, June 9 (AP)—The Italian government today sent to Vatican City a reply of two notes of protest filed by Pope Pius against dissolution of Catholic clubs for laymen and anti-Catholic demonstrations of the past two weeks.

The document was said to be conciliatory in tone.

It was delivered by Count de Vecchi Italian ambassador, to Cardinal Pacelli, the Papal Secretary of State.

Archbishop Borgongini, Papal Nuncio, met the ambassador at the Vatican and the three statesmen conferred for more than an hour.

POPE DEMANDS REPARATIONS

Italy's reply to the Pope was said to include answers to several points raised by the Vatican regarding insults to the Pontiff and demanding punishment of those guilty, reparations for alleged violation of extraterritoriality and an explanation for the closing of the Catholic clubs.

Its exact terms were not disclosed but the intimation that its tone was one of conciliation came from a thoroughly responsible source.

It could not be learned immediately, however, whether it constituted an apology to the Vatican.

As soon as Count de Vecchi left after delivering the note Cardinal Pacelli went to the Pope's apartment. He interrupted an audience the pontiff was having and remained there an hour.

It was assumed the note dealt extensively with the issue of the Catholic clubs, the major problem in dispute.

They were closed because the government contended their members were participating in politics, a charge which the Vatican denied.

MAY FORM NEW CLUBS

One compromise which has been suggested unofficially is that the old clubs be "purified" by the ex-

BEER HAILED AS SLUMP CURE

Washington, June 9 (INS)—The prohibition cauldron boiled a new policy as wets and drys awaited a reply from the Wickersham commission to the request of Senator Davis (R.) of Pennsylvania, for a report on its inquiry into the economic effects of permitting the sale of 4 per cent beer.

Joining with Davis in demanding that results of the inquiry be made public, Rep. Dyer (R.) of Missouri, House wet leader, announced he had been informed the commission's data was "highly favorable" to the sale of beer. He said he had been informed the commission's inquiry showed a modification of the Eighteenth Amendment, to permit 4 per cent beer, would go far toward ending the current depression.

"I feel the commission's findings should be made public," said Dyer. "According to my information, the commission went into the subject quite extensively."

Dyer meanwhile called on the new Congress to consider legislation permitting the sale of light wines and beer as a means of ending the current depression.

$40,000 BOOKS STOLEN FROM HARVARD

Widener. The offer was refused, he said.

The offer was a year ago, just before a reorganization was effected at the Harvard library to stop the thefts.

He said the thefts at Harvard were effected by a "William Mahoney," who managed to get himself acquainted at Peabody Museum as a writer interest in western frontier material.

Through acquaintances, Clark said, Mahoney procured a pass card to the library; located the books wanted by the ring and they later disappeared.

50 "SCOUTS" STEAL BOOKS

More than 50 such scouts were circulated throughout the country, he said, all of them educated and well bearing, with an ability to talk glibly on the subject in which they professed interest.

Identifying marks on rare volumes—secret marks that amount to a code among book connoisseurs—were eradicated with great care.

Those of the difficult sort were sent to a London expert.

He said he knew of the theft of "Oregon," a rare volume stolen from Boston Public Library.

It was later given to him by "Mahoney," and he took it to a Beacon Hill book store, he said. The actions of officials there showed they were aware that it was on the stolen list, he declared, and that's the first he knew it was "hot goods," he said.

He reported to Louis Felix Ranlett, chief ordering clerk of the Boston Public Library, he said, and told Ranlett that he was about to publish the expose. Ranlett advised against it on the grounds it would increase such thefts, he said.

RARE VOLUMES STOLEN

His story revealed that Concord Public Library lost at least 32 rare books, one of them a first edition of Longfellow that had been autographed by Ralph Waldo Emerson.

Asked why he took up quarters in a Revere hotel, where he was found with his 24-year-old wife yesterday, Clarke said he wanted a room with four windows so that he could have all the light available for his work.

HUGE PROFITS TOLD.

When he was arrested he had but 32 cents and had arrived at the room with a can of corned beef and a quart of milk.

One of the dealers in the huge racket he rescribed made a personal profit of $50,000 a year, Clarke said.

He said many of the stolen books were eventually returned to those from whom they were stolen, but only after the passed from the hands of the ring and found their way to reputable dealers.

ABSENT FINGERS FREES CROOK

London, June 9 (AP)—Eddie Guerin, 71, notorious criminal who once escaped from the French penal colony on Devil's Island, was saved from a three-year jail sentence today because he has only two fingers on his right hand.

The ex-convict was convicted of cashing forged checks, but won his appeal by establishing that one of the witnesses had testified the man for whom he cashed the checks had normal hands.

Chicago His Haunt Long Before "Scarface Al's" Time

New York, June 9 (AP)—The criminal career of Eddie Guerin leads back through the decades to Chicago in the days before that city had even dreamed of the organized rackets of modern times.

Chicago was Guerin's headquarters and his accomplices in his international forays against law and order was "Chicago May," a woman whose name was as well known to the police of two continents as his own.

In 1901 he was caught, convicted of taking $30,000 from the American Express Company in Paris and sentenced to the penal colony in French Guiana. He served four years, but then escaped and fled to London.

There he found "Chicago May," and there also he found Charles Smith, an American. The two men fought and Smith shot Guerin, for which he was sentenced to life in Dartmoor Prison. Smith didn't escape, but in 1922 he was released and deported to America.

At the time of the shooting France tried to have Guerin extradited to French Guiana, but English courts ruled he was a British subject.

Since then the name of Eddie Guerin has become legend in criminal annals. Every now and again, as in the present case in England, some clue points in his direction and he is again brought into the limelight, an aging but ever insolent, smiling figure for police and prosecutors to gnash their teeth over and generally for judges reluctantly to set at liberty.

pulsion of members inclined to take part in politics and reorganized under more direct supervision of the church. Something of this sort has been done tentatively in Northern Italy with the organization of new "congregations" whose membership is much the same as that of the clubs which were dissolved. The new organizations are meeting in the churches.

For a time it was feared the split between the church and state might result in a diplomatic break and recall from the Papal Nuncio in Rome.

OUTLOOK BRIGHTENS.

Both sides indicated they were anxious to avert any break which might undo the work of the Lateran treaty and the concordat between the Government and the Holy See.

Informal negotiations for a settlement were conducted by Cardinal Gasparri, retired Papal Secretary of State, and the Marchese Pacelli, the Pontiff's secretary.

These negotiations followed a series of disturbances in which Fascist students attacked Catholic institutions and were reported to have shouted insulting remarks concerning the Pope.

Count De Vecchi's visit revived optimism on both sides, for it was the first time the ambassador had been received at the Vatican since the present troubles began.

husband had met in New York. I wrote and said I was not the man, but offered to call and see her."

Describing the wedding, Terhune said his bride was an hour late, and he said his married life thereafter was a succession of nagging.

At that point he charged that she corresponded with a Belgian count after they returned to Boston and took up a residence in Hotel Somerset.

"She would ignore me and hardly speak a civil word," he said.

"One night she slept in the bathtub at the hotel and on another occasion she took her belongings and moved to Hotel Vendome.

"Later she returned and cried about it. A short time afterwards I gave her $50,000 and she went to Paris, where she is now." He placed the time as two days after Christmas in 1929.

Carpenter testified to a stormy session the couple had while he was a visitor at the Hotel Somerset apartment.

WYMAN ORDERS DEATH PROBE

March 5, 1904. Mrs. Wyman's maiden name was Helen McGregor Pierce and she was born in Andover.

Judge McCoole granted Mrs. Wyman custody of the two daughters, Starr and Elizabeth Tucker Wyman. Starr was born Jan. 27, 1906, and Elizabeth on Aug. 5, 1911.

REMARRIED IN 1925

The records at Boston City Hall show that Mrs. Wyman married Stanley E. Faithfull on February 7, 1925. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Ashley .'. Leavitt of 35 Vernon st., Brookline.

Faithfull told the New York police today that he saw no reason why his stepdaughter should commit suicide, although admitting that she had been subject to melancholia for some time.

The stepfather was to be questioned by police today regarding a report that he had destroyed a diary kept by the girl, and had refused to give any further information on the case. The police are anxious to learn the subject of recent entries in the diary.

Faithful told police the girl attended Brookline high school and also the exclusive Rogers Hall school in Lowell. Checkup at the Lowell institution revealed the name of Miss Starr Wyman, but no Miss Starr Faithful.

Additional credence was lent the murder theory by the statement of Miss Olive S. Parsons, principal of the Rogers Hall school, that Miss Wyman had excelled in athletics during the time she spent at the school and that she was especially proficient at swimming.

NAUTILUS GOES 240 MILES IN SINGLE DAY

Sir Hubert Wilkins' own story of his experiences on the historic journey of the Nautilus to England and thence to the North Pole will appear exclusively in the Boston Evening American and associated Hearst newspapers.

EXCLUSIVE!

Aboard Submarine Nautilus, At Sea, June 9—With both engines turning over at surprising speed, we put another 240 miles behind us yesterday. Our position last evening was latitude 41.23 north, longitude 52.58 west.

Sometime late today we should be at the turning point of our course.

We have been going east and today we will head more northerly on the usual track of steamers. One ship passed us going westward yesterday afternoon.

The seas are still sloppy and the watch on the bridge has little comfort. Below deck it is dry but the rolling makes the work of stowing strenuous.

Capt. Sloan Danenhower is well pleased with the Nautilus as a sea boat—in fact she is probably more seaworthy than most vessels. With the trimming of the tanks she can be made to assume any angle, and Engineer Shaw was busy last night shifting oil to the after tanks to bring the boat more out of water.

APPETITES KEEN

Notwithstanding the fairly dirty weather of the last two days, the hard work keeps up the appetites of all on board and the cook and mess boy are kept busy serving good things to eat.

Our messing is on the cafeteria plan. Every one walks by and gets his share. Some take their plates to their quarters, while others stand about the galley to eat their meals. With our electric refrigerator we are able to keep things fresh, and the fare is more or less as we would get on shore.

Our escort came near yesterday to say hello. This afternoon or tomorrow morning she will probably turn back and we will head out alone.

Wickie Board Goes On and On

—By Arthur "Bugs" Baer—

It must have copped another appropriation.

We can wise up the Wicky commish from memory. The first glass of 4 per cent brew makes you feel as if you can whip the world, committees and all.

The second glass confirms that opinion and the third glass makes you step out and try it.

The fourth stein of a 4 per cent suds is the best of all because that's the one the bartender throws in your face to bring you to after he has tapped you on the head with a bungstarter.

There is plenty of percentage in four plus beer and we hope the Wicker commish has worked itself up to that high pitch by easy stages.

One of its manifestations is to break up committees, reveal the future, separate the united and defy the law.

What the Wickerwackies require is a guinea pig for their 4 per cent tests. And as a horrible example of the vintage of 1910 we are willing to offer the pickled body to science.

As this committee was appointed by Mr. Hoover we warn him that he had better get used to hearing his doorbell ring at five in the morning and hearing the boys yell:

"Woo hoo, Herbie, itsh okay, old boy, old boy."

SON-IN-LAW IS CHARGED WITH LARCENY

Solomon Gross, principal in the recent Gross divorce case, was to appear in Salem Superior Court late today, charged with larceny of radio accessories and rental receipts valued at $22,000 from the estate of Harry Goodman, his father-in-law.

Secret indictments charging the various larcenies were returned against Gross last fall following complaints by his wife and late father-in-law and inspection by the Lynn police.

It is said that while Goodman was ill, Gross took charge of his radio business and committed alleged larcenies. The complaints also alleged Gross collected rentals from properties of Goodman and failed to turn in the full amount of his collections.

Gross was divorced by his wife in Salem probate court last winter in a sensational case in which she charged him with being intimate with Mrs. Katherine Perkins of Gloucester. It was charged in testimony during the trial that Mrs. Perkins attended a party in Ipswich with Gross, during which she danced, garbed only in a bandeau.

DEATH EXPOSE BRINGS ACTION

REVELATIONS several days ago by the Masked Reporter of the Boston Evening American in a heretofore hidden case of "Murder on the High Seas" is apparently bringing action by authorities and has aroused keen interest at Lunenberg, N. S., home port of Duncan Haughn, the alleged victim of rum-runners.

Lunenberg, N. S., June 9 (AP)—A tragedy of five years ago has aroused renewed interest with reports that Massachusetts authorities are contemplating investigation of the death of Duncan Haughn, a seaman reported lost from the Gloucester schooner Fanny B. in August, 1926. Haughn's body was sent home in a sealed casket and buried here.

Recently a Boston newspaper, in an article dealing with rum-running activities, reported that on August 4, the date set as that on which Haughn was supposed to have been washed overboard in a bad storm off Provincetown, the Weather Bureau reported fair weather, and that "C. E. Johnston," the captain who signed the telegram to Mrs. Haughn telling her of her husband's death and discovery of his body at Sandwich, Mass., was an alias.

"Johnston," the paper said, was lost at sea, under another name, a year ago. There was no inquest following the finding of Haughn's body.

NEW RUM ROW DEATH MYSTERY BARED

Willie Wagner's Passing Led to Arrest and Seizure of Liquor Ship

By THE MASKED REPORTER

Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American. All rights reserved.

I write today of another strange death in the rum fleet.

It is strange because the victim is none other than Willie Wagner.

Willie Wagner, you recall, was the rum-runner who, under the assumed name and title of Capt. C. E. Johnson, identified and claimed the body of Duncan Haughn, comrade in the rum ring, victim of alleged murder on Rum Row off Cape Cod.

It was Wagner who, learning that Haughn's body washed ashore at East Sandwich in 1926, went to Bourne, identified it, told a fairy tale of a storm at sea that swept Haughn from a fishing boat and sent the remains home to Lunenburg, N. S.

During my investigation of Haughn's alleged murder, in contact with the authorities and with the underworld, I was constantly encountering conflicting reports regarding Wagner's whereabouts—reports that he was alive and on rum row—reports that he was dead.

I know now that he is dead. His whereabouts I cannot state for his body never has been found.

He was drowned from the deck of a rum ship 10 miles off the Isles of Shoals north of Cape Ann, Gloucester, on January 8, 1930.

The rum ship from which he went to his death, the Independent II, of Gloucester, is today under government libel in a rum running case.

CAPTAIN INDICTED

Her captain, who was in command when Wagner was lost, is under federal grand jury indictment for violation of the customs.

He is Capt. Byron Peasley of Gloucester.

In this chapter of my expose of the underworld war now underway for control of New England's lucrative rackets, I make no inference that Wagner met his fate through any but accidental means but the story is one of superlative interest because Wagner is officially reported to have died under almost exactly the same circumstances that he himself related as attending Haughn's death.

And Wagner's death, incidentally, led three months later to the arrest of six men and the seizure of a large load of liquor and his ship.

Following his identification of Haughn's body and the $1000 settlement by his employers with Haughn's widow, Wagner continued his rum row to shore activities with the same rum syndicate.

There was no reason for him to make a change; his wife and six children had come here from Lunenburg, N. S.; he was making good money; the tongues that wagged in suspicion when Haughn was killed had been silenced.

On the morning of January 8, 1930, the Coast Guard patrol boat 154, out of Base 7, East Gloucester, was underway on patrol some 10 miles off the Isle of Shoals.

She was under the able command of Chief Boatswain's Mate Philip Kuuse.

Skipper Kuuse sighted the Independent II about 10 o'clock in the morning. She was flying a sheet at half mast.

The sea during the night had been choppy.

The Coast Guard skipper took his boat up to windward of the Independent II and asked the reason for the flying sheet.

He was informed by Capt. Peasely and two men who comprised the boat's crew that they had lost a man overboard, had indeed lost overboard Willie Wagner.

GRASP SLIPPED

Wagner, it seems, was drowned when he went overboard as his grasp slipped from the handle of a pump. He had been pumping because a leak had developed in the stuffing box.

Capt. Peasely informed Skipper Kuuse that the Independent II was leaking quite badly and asked an escort into Gloucester harbor.

This Kuuse provided after communicating by radio with the Gloucester base.

At Gloucester he boarded the Independent II and found a small amount of bilge water. Being an observant coast guard man he made certain important observations which later he reported to his superiors.

As a result of these observations which were contained in his official report, coast guard headquarters at Boston and customs officials in Boston were notified.

So, too, was City Marshal Daniel M. Casey, of Gloucester, a former Department of Justice investigator.

Marshal Casey conducted an inquiry and questioned Capt. Peasley. He notified authorities of nearby coastal cities and towns to be on the watch for Wagner's body so that an autopsy might be performed.

But Willie Wagner never came ashore.

Following his report, Skipper Kuuse was directed to confer with Deputy Collector of the Port Thomas Finnegan and Special Customs Agent Owen McKenna at Boston.

The result of this conference was that the Independent II, listed by the Coast Guard and customs authorities as the C1325, one of the "number boats" under five tons, was constantly under surveillance from Jan. 7 until April 10, when she was seized as a rum-runner.

Customs Officers John Mansfield and Leon Barum were assigned to watch the boat from which Willie Wagner went to his death.

They learned from federal spotters on April 9 that the Independent II had a cargo of liquor aboard. They checked her movements from rum row and learned she was headed for a "drop" in Ipswich on the Annisquam River.

CUGHT AT "DROP"

Early on April 10 they motored to the rendezvous and there seized on the beach four men, two trucks and 340 sacks of liquor.

The Independent II was just leaving the scene. They fired several shots in an attempt to halt her and failed. They telephoned the Coast Guard base at East Gloucester, and none other than Skipper Kuuse and the C. G. 154 were assigned to the chase.

The rum ship was captured in the Annisquam river and taken to the Gloucester base. Capt. Peasley and Herbert Goodhue, who were aboard her, were indicted by the federal grand jury.

Arraigned they pleaded not guilty and were bailed in $1000 each. The case against them is still pending.

The four men arrested on the beach all pleaded guilty. Robert Newhall of Lynn was fined $300 and given a six months' suspended sentence. Dominic Debonis of Everett was fined $500 and given the same sentence. Aramand Gauthie, of Salem and Alfred Turgeon of Salem were fined $200 each and given suspended sentences of six months.

Further revelations will be made tomorrow by the Masked Reporter.

RUM-RUNNING DEATH SHIP

SYLVIA SIDNEY AND PHILLIPS HOLMES HEAD PARAMOUNT CAST

Young Stars Featured in 'Dancers in the Dark' by Dorothy Speare

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, June 9—Never has Hollywood had so many strangers. Time was when we knew everyone at the various restaurants. Now every third person is a newcomer here on some special mission. One of the most recent arrivals is Dorothy Speare, writer.

Louella O. Parsons

Let me tell you about Miss Speare. She is the author of "Dancers in the Dark," a novel of which 100,000 copies have been sold. She is now adapting her best seller for Paramount.

Sylvia Sidney, who is being put into bigger and better pictures as time goes on, plays the feminine lead with Phillips Holmes co-featured. Plans are being made, 'tis said, to team this young pair. Phil is also to have the lead in "The Bengal Lancers," Ernest Schoedsack's adventure tale. It will be filmed in India.

THE PLATINUM BLONDE could get no better title than the story called "The Blonde Lady." As soon as Harry Cohn purchased it he thought of Jean Harlow, but alas, she was slated to do "The Greeks Had a Word for It." A little arranging here and a little arranging there put Joan Blondell into Jean's role in "The Greeks Had a Word for It," and Jean into "The Blonde Lady." Little Harlow has been making personal appearances, and I am told she has gone very, very well. She is the type that the girl friend is jealous of and the boy friend admires. I heard a young married woman say the other day, "I'd be awfully jealous if my husband ever looked twice at Jean Harlow." She must have that certain thing called "it."

Great Future Seen for Clara Bow

I HAD A TALK with Darryl Zanuck, the new general manager of First National-Warner Brothers studios. Darryl always has his eye on all the main chances and he tells me he believes that Clara Bow will make her best pictures in the future.

"You may look for a sensational comeback," says Darryl. "The trouble with Clara is she has been kept continually in flapper roles. They are out of date. A good story will do wonders for her, and when she is better I'd like to talk to her," he said.

I am not Clara's agent and cannot speak for her plans, but I know two other producers have expressed the same sentiments. They, too, would like to talk business to her.

HOT FROM Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios comes the word that little Leila Hyams will play the girl in "Get-Rich-Quick-Wallingford" opposite William Haines. Jean Hersholt has just been put under a new contract by M. G. M., likewise John Miljan. Louis B. Mayer isn't letting any of the players who make his pictures good, escape. John Murray Anderson is leaving for Europe. He returns here in the fall. He may produce a musical play in New York called "Let's Have It," but I am told he is very eager to come back to Hollywood.

Leila Hyams

DRESSED IN the latest fashion and with a real Parisian air, Nina Mae MacKinney arrived in Los Angeles. Some who saw her on the Paris boulevards say that Nina had every male head turned in her direction when she walked down the street. She came back to Hollywood from her European triumphs for her role in "Safe in Hell," Warner Brothers' sizzling dramatic number. Miss MacKinney, one of the most famous actresses of her race, has had several other screen offers. She is very light in color and very pretty, so pretty that everyone who saw her in "Hallelujah" commented on her beauty.

THERE ARE plenty of Spaniards in Hollywood. If you don't believe it listen to this list that comes to me from John Brown, writer of social doings on the Los Angeles Examiner. He says today there will be a gathering of distinguished Spanish artists of southern California at the Ambassador Hotel Cocoanut Grove, a celebration given in honor of the forthcoming fiesta. Among the guests of honor who will occupy ringside seats are Dolores Del Rio, Antonio Moreno, Leo Carrillo, Ernesto Vilches, Count Andres de Segurola, Jose Bohr and scores of others. A list of Spanish names that would tie your tongue will furnish an endless round of novelty and entertainment throughout the evening. It sounds grand. Hope we can be there.

Dolores Del Rio

COMMENTING ON Hollywood and its curious ways, Marie Dressler called my attention to the fact that four former leading ladies played in her last picture, "Politics." They played only bits and were glad to get them. They were Frankie Bailey, who used to be the toast of Broadway, Margaret Mann, the mother in "Four Sons," Florence Turner and Ella Hall.

"I thought it interesting, said Marie, "when I saw them all together on my set and a little sad, yet they all seemed happy enough. I was glad they had a part in my picture."

Class, Speed in Scollay Show

Memories of old-time vaudeville bills are scheduled at the Scollay this week, where a very good stage show is on view. The seven acts have class, speed, balance and variety.

Three colored dancers, called "The Three Punches," display a new brand of fast stepping; Thelma D'Onzo, Sister Sally and Co. do a splendid turn of dancing, high-kicking, fancy jumping and musical specialties; Tracy and Vinette in a rough and tumble comedy hit prove to be very funny, followed by Smith, Strong and Lee in a special comedy skit. They get many laughs.

Billy DeWolfe and Femmes, as the next act is called, present a dance offering that is both novel and entertaining. DeWolfe, a Boston boy, is very nimble and his acrobatic dancing scored heavily. Cole and Snyder in their famous skit, "The Director," are uproariously funny; this act will be remembered as the one in which a Chaplin "short" is displayed on the screen, while the boys on the stage do the directing. Jack and Jerry, in a roller-skating turn, close the bill.

Begins Novel

Ramon Novarro, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star has a new field of artistic endeavor. He has taken up writing and is now at work on a novel with a Mexican background which is as yet untitled. He hopes to complete his book during his vacation.

STARS OF STAGE HOLD FORT AT END OF SEASON

World Events Featured in Hearst Metrotone News

The most unusual launching that was ever filmed is pictured in the Hearst Metrotone News and thrillingly described by the Globe Trotter. The pictures, shown at leading theaters, present the unchristened cruiser Deutschland prematurely gliding down the ways in the very middle of Chancellor Bruening's speech introducing President von Hindenberg, who was to have named the new ship.

Sixty thousand persons, stunned by the unexplained accident stand silent for a moment until a band strikes up "Deutschland ueber Alles" which breaks the tension. In spite of his failure to break the customary bottle of champagne over the warship's prow, President von Hindenburg delivers his christening speech with the Deutschland settled securely in the water, and he is heartily cheered.

Assisted by Mrs. William Howard Taft, widow of the former President and chief justice of the Supreme Court, President and Mrs. Hoover unveil a mangnificent statue in Washington dedicated to those who lost their lives in the sinking of the great transatlantic liner Titanic in 1912. The impressive statue is the work of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

For the first time in two years water is shown pouring over the Cornell Dam of the Croton reservoir, which makes a magnificent picture of a miniature Niagara.

The gigantic dirigible Graf Zeppelin, familiar to most Americans, is ready for its dash to the North Pole in connection with the Wilkins' experiment. The Zeppelin is under the command of the intrepid Eckener, and with Carl Von Wiegand and Lady Drummond Hay aboard as usual.

There are thrilling pictures of the great air armada over the City of Boston. The war maneuvers of the 600 planes are thrillingly carried out. The Hub city is saved from destruction by an imaginary foe. Thousands view the magnificent spectacle from the streets and the house tops, and the benches, too, are crowded with spectators.

Marion Davies at Orpheum

"It's a Wise Child," Marion Davies' newest comedy, adapted from Laurence E. Johnson's stage success of the same name, comes to the screen at Loew's Orpheum Friday.

Harry Kahne, world's supreme mentalist, who features his feat, "The Mathematical Maze," will headline the vaudeville bill. Dave Harris, versatile entertainer, and Frankie, comedian, will appear as another feature of the bill in a magical satire called "Legerdemain."

Dave Harris' "Varieties," a tabloid singing, dancing and instrumental revue, and the distinguished Chinese tenor, Jue Fong, in "Songs You Like to Hear," will be others on the bill.

A program of short features and Hearst Metrotone News are also included in the show.

"Just a Gigolo" at State on Friday

William Haines opens at Loew's State Friday in "Just a Gigolo," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's adaptation of Belasco's stage hit, "Dancing Partner." The irresponsible Haines gives dancing lessons and learns a lesson in love and a slap in the face that opens the doorway to a life of happiness.

Harty Coming to Direct Pops

Sir Hamilton Harty, distinguished English conductor, is to visit Boston and take over a Pop concert, according to a cable received at Symphony Hall from W. H. Brennan, manager of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who is now in England.

The invitation was made at the suggestion of Arthur Fiedler, who has long admired Sir Hamilton, and has introduced his arrangement of "A Londonderry Air" at the Pops. The English musician is about to make his first trip to America as conductor. He has been engaged to conduct a series of concerts in the Hollywood Bowl in July. When he leads the last of the Sunday Pop concerts in Symphony Hall on June 21, he will make his only appearance in the eastern United States.

Pops Tonight

"Le Coq d'Or," Wedding March	Rimsky-Korsakov
"London Symphony," Minuet	Haydn
Largo	Handel
"Tales from Johann Strauss"	Korngold
"Aida," Fantasia	Verdi
"Oberon," Overture	Weber
"Streets of Pekin," Suite (Conducted by the composer)	Hadley
"Mlle. Modiste," Selection	Herbert
"Jalousie," Tango	Gade
"Lohengrin," Introduction to Act III	Wagner

"Fighting the Slavers" Continues at Majestic

"Fighting the Slavers" continues at the Majestic. The story centers around two girls, one a poor and ambitious Berlin dancer, the other a girl from a home of wealth, both of whom fall into the toils of Wolf Sanka, head of a white slave ring. The producers of the film had the co-operation of the police authorities in many European capitals.

General Manager of RKO Sees Bright Outlook for All Theaters

Joseph Plunkett, vice-president and general manager of RKO theaters, who returned with Mrs. Plunkett from a short holiday abroad on the Ile de France, is enthusiastic about the theatrical outlook on both sides the Atlantic. Everywhere in Europe, especially in England, he reports, an optimistic attitude exists.

"Everyone in England," he says, "seems to be out for amusement today. As in America, they are 'shopping' for their amusements and mediocrity is fatal, but the worth while things are being patronized in the legitimate, in the varieties and on the screen. In Germany, the slogan seems to be 'bread first—then the movies.'"

Mr. Plunkett inspected the new studios being erected at Ealing, England, by RKO's English affiliation, the Associated Radio Pictures. Here he witnessed Basil Dean's latest production starring Gracie Fields, called "Sally In Our Alley." Also "Footsteps In The Night" with Benita Hume, who appeared in America in "Symphony In Two Flats." This later picture is considered a distinct novelty in that the dialogue has been reduced to thirty-five per cent of the footage and the balance is made up of sound effects, which is distinctly a new angle and in Mr. Plunkett's opinion an interesting experiment.

Of interest, is Mr. Plunkett's observation regarding the great revival of interest at present in England in the legitimate attractions and in the varieties.

While Mr. Plunkett has been away, he has kept closely in touch with the operations of Radio-Keith-Orpheum and its many ramifications and he is equally enthusiastic over the summer outlook at home. Comparable with the prevailing interest he found in stage shows abroad, he discerns a definite popularity of vaudeville in this country.

The picture product is also extremely attractive and noteworthy, according to the RK chief. After "Donovan's K with Richard Dix and "Skipp Cooper will come "White Shou ders," a Rex Beach story, with Mary Astor, Ricardo Cortez and Jack Holt. RKO-Pathe is beginning its regular releases under new regime and several interesting pictures will be presented, including Helen Twelvetrees in "Woman of Experience" and Constance Bennett in "Common Law."

Some of the most interesting pictures on its entire schedule are offered by Universal during June and July. They include "Strictly Dishonorable" by Preston Sturges, "East of Borneo" by Dale Van Every and Don Ryan; "Fate" by Erich Maria Remarque; "The Whole Town's Talking" by John Emerson and Anita Loos.

The Columbia summer schedule includes "Lover Come Back," soon to be seen, with Constance Cummings, Betty Bronson, Jack Mulhall and Susan Fleming; the Frank Capra production, "The Miracle Woman," with Barbara Stanwyck, and "Arizona" with Laura La Plante and John Wayne.

Exeter Theater

Louise Huntington in "The Viking" and Barbara Stanwyck in "Ten Cents a Dance" are the attractions for today and tomorrow at the Exeter. The last half of the week Bela Lucosi will be seen in "Dracula." Jack Oakie in "June Moon" will also be shown.

CHURCH ELECTS BUFFUM AS PRESIDENT

Robert E. Buffum of Belmont, Boston lawyer, today assumed the presidency of the first Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, to which he was elected at the largest meeting in the history of the Mother Church.

More than 7000 members of the church from all over the world overtaxed the capacity of the auditorium late yesterday, filled the original structure adjacent, and overflowed into the corridors below the auditorium, where amplifiers carried the reports of the officers of the church.

In his inaugural address the new president lauded the growth in interest in the activities of the church which have necessitated plans for the construction of a new $3,000,000 publishing plant, to be erected in Norway st., adjoining the First Church.

"It is a matter of great pride to us as members of the mother church that the growth of the activities of our Christian Science Publishing Society necessitates the new and larger building already planned," Mr. Buffum declared.

"We welcome the opportunity to assist in this forward step, with the realization that this important undertaking is not merely an end to be attained, but rather a necessary step in the progress of Christian Science in order to make possible its greater service to mankind."

The new president is a native of Keene, N. H., and a graduate of the Boston University Law School. As a member of the law firm of Abbott, Dane, Buffum & Howe, he was counsel for the Christian Science board of directors in the litigation in which the church was involved several years ago.

Mr. Buffum entered the Mother Church in 1908, and has since served as first reader, president and director of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Cambridge.

$333,333 COLBY FEE CONTESTED

Washington, June 9 (AP)—Efforts of Bainbridge Colby, former Secretary of State, to collect a fee of $333,333 in a war claims case have been met by the charge that he misrepresented facts in the suit to his client, the Interocean Oil Company, Inc., of New York.

The suit is pending in the District of Columbia Supreme Court.

The company and its subsidiary, the United States Asphalt Refining Co., recovered approximately $1,000,000 in 1926 from Germany as damages for four ships sunk by submarines during the World War.

Colby and his law partner, Edward D. Brown of New York, represented the concern under an agreement that they would receive a third of the amount recovered.

Through its attorneys, Harvey D. Jacobs and Walter M. Bastian, the Interocean Oil Company contends the $333,333 is excessive in view of the work that Colby and his partner did.

U. S. Drinks More Wine Than When Wet

Paris, June 9 (AP)—Hugh E. Fox, secretary of the United States Brewers' Association, today told the Congress of the International League of Prohibition Adversaries that the United States is consuming 100,000,000 gallons more of wine annually than before prohibition.

Fat Men

I don't care how fat you are or how much you hate to get out and walk a couple of miles. If you will take one-half a teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning for 4 weeks and cut out pastries, sugar and fatty meats—

You will feel so good—so energetic and the urge for activity will be so great that you will immensely enjoy a daily walk of several miles—and lose fat.

While you are losing fat you will be gaining in energy—in endurance—in ambition. Your skin will grow clearer and your eyes will sparkle with the good health that Kruschen brings.

Just try one 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts; it will last you 4 weeks. After you have taken one bottle the old arm chair won't hold you any more—you'll want to be up and doing—you'll enjoy work—you'll sleep like a top and probably live years longer. Get Kruschen at any live druggist in America with the understanding that you must be joyfully satsified or money back.

W. R. Daniels of Richmond Hill, N. Y., writes: "After 2 bottles of Kruschen, I've removed 3 inches from my belt, feel 25% more active, mind is clearer, eruptions have disappeared. Am 46 years old and feel 20 years younger. I get up feeling 100%. Kruschen sure great!"

PSORIASIS is a stubborn skin disease. I suffered with it for years. Write R. S. Payne, Covington, Ky., P. O. Box 95.

of the new SOCONY MOTOR OIL

in only 30 weeks!

IN only 30 weeks since its introduction we have actual record of more than 3,350,000 purchases of the new Socony Motor Oil! Hundreds of thousands of motorists have proved to their own satisfaction that the new Socony Motor Oil is even better than Socony Aircraft—good as that was!

And no wonder! This is the same oil that stood the test of a 5½-day-and-night run under the supervision of the American Automobile Association on the torturing Indianapolis Speedway. With crankcase temperatures 100 degrees above normal it refused to break down. After 7,290 miles (a whole year's driving by A.A.A. averages) valves, pistons and other parts showed only a slight trace of carbon. Practically no wear! You couldn't put your car through such a test!

Stop in at a Socony dealer, garage or service station today. Consult the New Socony Motor Oil chart, which, by a new scientific method, shows the proper grade for your car. Fill up. Save with Socony this summer!

WILLIAMS-CREIGHTON WEDDING IN HISTORIC TRINITY TODAY

BEACON HILL

—by—

Betty Alden

THE FACT THAT IT WAS SHOWERY, AND THE DARK clouds threatened a deluge all day, did not interfere with many luncheon rendezvous yesterday at the Ritz. Dropping in, as we so often do, to hear Ruby's Harmonians play "Lover, Come Back to Me," and pick up the latest story for you, we were sitting alone looking out over the Public Garden, wondering whether we, too, should take a ferry across the Big Pond this summer to absorb some of that Parisian sophistication as the debs do—though what we should do with it in Boston after we got it is another story entirely—or don a peasant smock, plant a few seedlings and nurse a tan—our gaze fell on a tall, handsome brunette entering the dining room, Mrs. Robert Herrick, Jr. It persuaded us to speculate on the ways of men and women, marriage and heritage.

MRS. ROBERT F. HERRICK, JR.

The story is that Grandfather Herrick owned one of those places that did a rushing business, especially Saturday nights, out near Dover st. But he had different ideas for his son, Robert. To Harvard he sent him, where he was one of the most popular men ever to graduate from that institution. He was captain of the crew, a great sport and a good friend.

Married Again Two Years Ago

AFTER HE LANDED IN THE BUSINESS WORLD, HE married a Miss Taft, who presented him with two children, one the present Robert Herrick, Jr., and Alice, who is now Mrs. George S. Mumford, Jr. The mother of these two died, and two years ago Mr. Herrick astonished the chair-rockers by marrying a lady with young ideas, Mrs. George Rice of Dedham-way. You may remember that her son, George Rice, was recently married in Ireland and returned to this country.

THE FIRST WE HEARD about the Herricks was when they lived down on the North Shore. Young Robert and his wife, who was Thelma Hall of Milton, were enlivening all the dinner parties with their escapades—or shall I say his temperament. But I shall not go into a story of the stormy life of Bob and Thelma. Enough it is that they were divorced in due time and were awarded joint custody of the children. Thelma threw herself into her painting in earnest—she is a very talented portrait-painter, especially of children—and for a time seemed quite contented.

BUT ROBERT MARRIED again, Mrs. Pierce of New York—the aforementioned brunette—and the first Mrs. Robert longs for her children, the parting each time they are sent to their father is harder, so she is now appealing to the courts to give Bobby and Margy to her for all the time. We hope she wins as we have a very primitive idea that children belong to their mothers.

* * *

THE PRESENT MRS. HERRICK, JR., who looks like a thoroughbred and might handle Robert's temperament differently than the other, has two children also by her former marriage. We wonder if Grandfather Herrick is looking down from somewhere and meditating on what Harvard does for a generation, or Dover st.

Chanler Girl to Wed June 16

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER

New York, June 9 (US)—Dorothy Chanler, daughter of that picturesque figure, the late Robert Winthrop Chanler, who was long addressed in society as "Sheriff Bob" Chanler, will be married to Julian Twells Trenholm on June 16.

I learned today that Dorothy, who has been making her home with her auntie, Mrs. John Jay Chapman, is arranging a very simple ceremony in the Little Church Around the Corner, and there will be none of the usual frills that have marked weddings in the Chanler clan in the past.

One could write columns about Dorothy's progenitors and the "past performances" of her family. Those with memories will recall that her father, a descendant of the original John Jacob Astor, dear old Peter Stuyvesant, John Winthrop, the first English governor of Massachusetts, etc., startled society some years ago by taking, as his second wife, the beautiful Lina Cavalieri, the opera star.

The marriage was pertly commented upon by "Sheriff Bob's" brother, John Armstrong Chanler, who had been adjudged insane in New York State, and who was at the time in a sanitarium down in Virginia.

Mr. Chanler sent "Sheriff Bob" a telegram reading: "Who's Looney Now?"

Dorothy's mother, Mrs. J. Chamberlain Chanler, lives in Paris as does the future bride's sister, Julia, who became Mrs. George Watson Beach, Jr., in 1929.

Associated with Mrs. Judd are Mrs. William J. MacDonald, Mrs. Russell A. Cone, Mrs. William S. Youngman, Miss L. Gertrude Howes, and several other well known club women. Proceeds will go to support the Seaside Camp for Crippled Children.

The reception, immediately following the ceremony, is being held at the Beacon st. home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert M. Creighton.

The role of maid of honor is filled by Miss Constance Creighton, a debutane of 1929-30 season, and a sister of the bride.

There are nine attendants—Miss Evelyn Ames, another '29-'30 deb, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oakes Ames of Bay State rd.; Miss Susan Wigglesworth, whose parents are Mr. and Mrs. Norton Wigglesworth of Milton; Miss Peggy Read, who is marrying Samuel Batchelder June 25 in Cambridge; Miss Helen Curtis of Concord; Miss Nora Borden, who came on from New York Saturday to stay until after the wedding and who was Miss Creighton's roommate at Westover School; Miss Mary Armstrong of Winchester, a cousin; Miss Dorothy Rogers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Blake Williams, and his other brother, Thomas B. Williams, is the best man. The Williams family live on Marlborough st. in the winter and Cohasset in the summer. Mr. Williams was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1930. He belongs to the Hasty Pudding and Harvard Clubs.

Miss Creighton made her social debut in 1927 and is a member of both the Junior League and Vincent Club.

Oh! We almost forgot the smallest member of the bridal party—little Miss Betty Abbott, a cousin of the bride.

Last evening Mr. and Mrs. Creighton entertained at a dinner for them and about a dozen other guests. When all the wedding festivities are over the Creightons, minus one daughter, will go down to Little's Point, Swampscott, for the summer.

Latest Styles in Black and White Shoes

By ANN ARDEN

SINCE IT is to be a white summer, the natural supposition is that the idea would wend its way downward to shoes. But it is hard to believe until you see them how very beautiful the newer styles of white shoes really are, perhaps the most interesting of them being those that are designed in black and white.

THE MORE usual buckskin shoes are being done much in this same manner. These are better for sportier wear when the shoes are called upon to give a greater degree of actual service.

BUT THE shapes of them are possibly their most-to-be-praised features. They are delicate in the extreme.

SHEER BEAUTY reaches a new level of smartness by widening the mesh of thin hose. The increased width of the mesh gives the new hose the quality of sheerness and retains the modish beauty of dark shades. This hose is limited to formal wear, of course, being completely unsuited to street or informal occasions. It is a clever accessory to the black and white ensemble.

* * *

New Women?

SEX-REPRESSED LADY, DID SHE EVER EXIST?

—By Agnes Smith—

Those who believe that the clothes women wear affect their manners, their morals and their very characters, like to think that the end of flapper fashions and the inauguration of a more decorous mode presages a new type of woman—or rather a reversion to an old type.

The prospect of an attempted revival of the Victorian lady causes a newspaper writer to lift her hands in horror and exclaim, "Do men really want the return of the wishy-washy, clinging vine Victorian woman?"

And that is considered a good effective squelch. If you want to condemn a person, an idea, a work of art or a house, all you have to do is to shout "Victorian!"

Did She Ever Exist?

As for the Victorian woman as we imagine her, was there ever really such a female? Perhaps she existed, in a comparatively small way, in London parlors and had her imitators in similar parlors in New York, Boston and Philadelphia.

Yet from the smugness of a rich and respectable London parlor came Florence Nightingale. How many other Miss Nightingales failed to emerge into the larger affairs of the world? And the genteel homes of the Northeastern American cities produced those bands of lady abolitionists who demanded that something be done about slavery. The articulate Harriet Beecher Stowe was not a solitary phenomenon; she represented thousands of less eloquent ladies.

They existed, too, in novels—those ladies we snub as Victorian. Consider Amelia Sedley of "Vanity Fair," a perfect example of the wishy-washy type. But in considering Amelia you cannot overlook Becky Sharp, whose daring and unscrupulous spirit makes modern fiction heroines seem timid and sentimental by comparison.

Where you have a Dora Copperfield as the complete clinging vine, you have an Agnes possessed of innate courage, strength and independence.

Victoria's Romance

I doubt if Queen Victoria herself was really Victorian. Her literary style was florid, careless and shallow; her social dictates were stuffy and narrow-minded. But beneath these outward manifestations, partly thrust upon her by her queenly position, was a valid woman.

Although her age has come to stand for repressed desires, I do not think that Victoria herself suffered from repressions. Her married life was an ardent romance. The warmth of the love between Victoria and her Albert is a little shocking to critical historians; by all psychological laws, the Queen and Prince Consort should have suffered from every known inhibition.

Victorian ladies did not talk about sex appeal. Today girls either have it or haven't it by some unknown arbitrary rule. Perhaps the Victorian women assumed, in their foolish way, that sex appeal is the natural gift of any woman.

The most triumphant compliment ever paid to a woman was dedicated to a Victorian wife. You remember, of course, Disraeli's toast to his 80-year-old wife, "My dear, you have been more like a mistress than a wife to me."

I think Lady Beaconsfield enjoyed a happiness that most women fail to achieve: she had the dignity and permanence of marriage plus the gayety and spontaneity of an illicit romance. Historians picture her as an old silly; if she was, then silliness is a good thing in marriage.

Coming nearer to home we find another Victorian lady who is always cruelly criticized for curbing and thwarting the genius of her husband. There is a literary legend that the prudish Mrs. Samuel Clemens blighted the full flowering of Mark Twain's humor. Mrs. Clemens edited her husband's writing, removing all words, ideas or phrases likely to offend delicate sensibilities.

Undoubtedly many fine, rugged sentences were eliminated by her censorious pencil. On the other hand, a great many crude, cheap and unworthy lines must have been destroyed, too. I have read some of the suppressed pieces by Mark Twain that escaped the supervision of his wife. They are superior vulgar stories, but Twain's real genius lies in his "edited" works.

She Was Right

All in all, I think Mrs. Clemens was right. Twain's own evidence supports her completely. Captious and belligerent about the interference of outside editors, he placed complete confidence in his wife's judgment of his work.

His biographers would have you believe that he was cowed and intimidated by the redoubtable Victorian Woman, just as Prince Albert and Disraeli and other devoted husbands of the era were supposed to have been enslaved by their wives. But Twain himself always wrote of his wife with sincere tenderness and awe; her Victorian prudery amused him and touched him.

And it must have inspired him because, in spite of her limited mind and her frail body, she was to him a course of peace, security and beauty.

After seeing some modern plays and reading some current novels, I wish that some of the literary gentlemen of today were married to Victorian wives. Dozens of contemporary writers would find their style improved if they had gentle but firm invalid wives to remind them that repetitious vulgarity is merely dull reading and that bad words cannot take the place of good ideas.

Other Men's Thoughts.

By Richard Wetjen "Fiddler's Green"; Little Brown Co.:

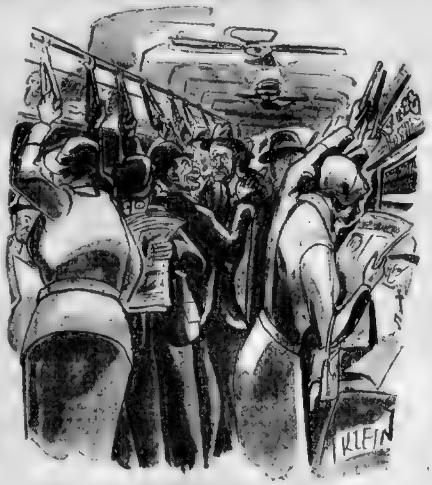
"One of the tallest of the tall stories of the sea concerns a fabulous ship that could sail on a heavy dew. She lost her bearings in a fog one day, but still kept going, and when the fog cleared they discovered she was seven miles up on a dry creek and still making five knots.

"It was the custom of the crews on the old Cape Horn run to rifle the cargo whenever it was of stuff easy to dispose of. The penalty was extreme, but no one was ever caught. I have seen gnarled old A. B.'s stroll ashore to the nearest pawnshop carrying beneath their serges several pairs of ladies' silk hose, underwear, men's shirts, maybe a corset or two. Only one shipper, as far as I know, ever solved the problem. He was a shoe manufacturer, and after several experiments he marked all his boxes SHOES in plain language instead of the usual mysterious symbols—but he sent all left shoes out on one ship and all rights out on the next. After the first shipment not one of his boxes was ever opened."



"I feel so good this morning, Herbert, I could do a handspring!"

Al Fresco

—By Bruno Lessing—

Berlin—Took a trip to Weimar, where Goethe lived and wrote. Wandered through the rooms of his house in the hope that I might absorb some stray idea he had left behind him, but he must have cleaned them all up.

Weimar is very proud of Goethe. Streets, buildings and cafes are named after him. His picture is widely displayed. The hotel porter told me the exact number of visitors who came to Weimar to see the poet's house every year for the past 10 years. He also knew most of the events of Goethe's life, including a few scandals. When I asked him which of the poet's works he liked the best, he shrugged his shoulders.

"I never read any," he said. "I'm too busy."

March 22, 1932, will be the centenary of Goethe's death, which all Germany is planning to celebrate. One of the best ways to celebrate, one would think, would be to read what he wrote. In addition to being a great poet and a great philosopher Goethe was also a great scientist.

A noticeable difference between Berlin and Paris is that here most eating and drinking is done indoors, while in Paris everyone who can—if the weather is nice—eats and drinks outdoors.

Of course, there are places in Berlin where you can drink in the open and a few where you can eat in the open. But throughout France it is a widespread habit.

It led me to wondering why Americans do not eat more in the open than they do. (That's an awfully messy sentence.) Drinking, of course, is out of the question.

Although, if we had always drunk in open spaces instead of behind screens and doors and glazed windows, we might not be prohibited today. But just eating. I know so many people in many states who have lovely gardens behind or on the side of or in front of their homes, who prefer to eat indoors.

Even in Southern California, which has the best climate in the world for the longest portion of each year, outdoor eating has never become what you would call a custom. A few rich people, of course, lunch and dine under palm trees. But the millions eat within walls.

In the poorest quarter of any French city you can get a cheap meal on the sidewalk, on a warm day, and watch the flux of humanity. Isn't it better than watching a lot of dancers?

Of course, you can't have your cocktail or your wine or beer in the open, because some snooper will tip off a prohibition agent. And maybe we Americans are more modest than these Europeans and don't want others to see us eating.

Come to think of it, I wouldn't want any of my friends to know what I ate in a beer garden last night. G. whiz! Pigs' knuckles, sauerkraut, pfannekuchen, potatoes, asparagus, cervelat, beet salad, two kinds of cheese. And Pilsener beer!

No. I wouldn't have the nerve to do it in the open in U. S. A.

"Oh Yeah"

—By Gilbert Seldes—

It occurs to me that the man or woman who first said, "Oh, Yeah," with a sliding upward intonation was really a great American satirist. We are supposed, by H. L. Mencken and certain foreign observers, to be a nation peculiarly given to the bunk, but if we are, we recognize the bunk with amazing swiftness (we invented the word) and we create our own antidotes. When we hear anything exaggerated or pretentious or phoney we say, "Oh, Yeah"—unless we are too refined, in which case we only think it. Phrases like that and "Is that so?" which mean very little when printed and depend a great deal on the way they are said, are as characteristic of America as the cockney "Yes, I don't think," which expresses the same scepticism with a touch of irony.

A French Gesture

I do not know what the French equivalent for these expressions may be. There is a gesture in which the open hand, palm downward, is tapped against the chin, which the tougher classes in Paris use to signalize their doubt of the truth or good intentions of a speaker. Perhaps it is a characteristic—in accordance with our ideas it is certainly suitable—that the French should use a gesture. In any case, the tap on the chin is more typically a French way of satirical expression than such a novel as Anatole France's "Penguin Island," and although "Gulliver's Travels" is a masterpiece of savage irony, it is the work of a single genius, and what is called the genius of the whole race may be better expressed in a phrase of cockney slang. Certainly a single "Oh, Yeah" is worth 500 pages of "Babbitt," and part of the superiority of Ring Lardner as a satirist comes from his sticking so close to the common formula.

Satire in Musical Shows

I saw the other night a musical show which is largely satirical in its attitude—"The Band Wagon"—and I was moved to wonder whether the edge of American satire was not being a little bit blunted. The parts that came off well and were superlativly funny all leaned a little on burlesque, which has always been a typical quality of American humor—ninety per cent of Mark Twain's most popular works are burlesque exaggerations. In three or four minutes "The Band Wagon" presented a fore-shortened view of an old style musical show, including blackouts, torch songs, adagio dancers and choruses, and there was a burlesque of collegiate sport transferred to the future when a history examination will be ballyhooed as football is now. But the purely satirical sketches all seemed a little strained, as if Mr. George Kaufman, who was concerned with that fine satirical fantasy, "Beggar on Horseback" and "Dulcy" and "To the Ladies," had lost faith in his own scepticism. (Perhaps a musical show isn't the best place for satire anyhow—the great ones have always been either simple or roistering, and the simple and roisterous portions of "The Band Wagon" are first class.)

Reviving the Undying

The museum for the Keystone Cops and the obituary for them which I wrote the other day seem to be premature. A new group has been formed in Hollywood, which, in addition to having such prime Keystoners as Ford Sterling, Chester Conklin, Hank Mann and Mark Swain, will actually present the original Keystone Cops. As I ventured to call them immortal, I am not at all chagrined by their return, and I only wonder whether the hilarity and the madness which touched them in the good old days can be recaptured in these bad new times.

Looking for a Bribe

I note with considerable resentment the statement of Dr. Joseph Stevenson of the Board of Christian Education, that "the millionaire group is pouring out money to defeat prohibition. The metropolitan press is not conveying the real news, but has prostituted itself in the temple of Mammon to create a return of terror on his great problem." My resentment is not against this slur on a free and mighty press. The press can take care of itself. I am only sore because not a trickle of this flood of millionaires' money has ever come my way. A dilemma occurs: Either I have a reputation for being incorruptible, which will keep me out of the money forever, or I am not important enough to be worth bribing.

Once during the war I was one of half a dozen men in England who were supposed to be secretly receiving pay from a news agency which was disliked by the British government. Jolly pro-Britishers as we were, none of us minded the slur on our honor, but we did think that if we were going to be suspected by the British we ought, at least, to cash in on it.

Incidentally, the suggestion that the metropolitan press is not publishing what the drys consider the truth about prohibition is thoroughly invalidated, not only by the facts and figures but by the cheerful display it gives to accusations like this one.

Man About Town

—By AL DUFFY—

RUM RUNNERS

A low, black, sinister-looking limousine roared past us and disappeared down the road into the darkness. It was riding so heavily on its springs that we immediately set it down as a rum-runner. Once started on the subject there was no end to the fantastic tales that were told about this group of law breakers. Stories of adventurous chases, of thrilling escapes and of daring high-jacking were related. Here is the yarn that to me, was the most interesting of all.

There is a body builder in a town not too far from Boston who has made what your mother and mine used to call a pretty penny in the past few years building fake bodies for rum-runners' cars. He has fashioned all sorts of hide-aways and secret compartments for the storage of contraband in the tonneaus of innocent-looking autos. Some of these special bodies escape detection for months and the body builder's masterpiece—his greatest job of camouflage—has been in use for five years and has never even been stopped.

You've seen those telephone company trucks carrying big hoops of cable, lumbering along the highways. Well, the body builder has fashioned an exact duplicate of one of those trucks with two fake hoops of cable. The liquor is stored inside of the false wooden hoops that the cable is wound on and the truck has been lumbering along in broad daylight for five years now and no one has ever even thought to suspect it.

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

What downtown hotel, which has been hailed as a Boston institution for three generations, and which preserves within its walls many of the relics of the original hostelry, is now in such a financial muddle that there is no money available for taxes? . . . What city official who is very deaf led the applause one night recently when an after-dinner speaker paid tribute to him? . . . What is that sort of understanding smile that red heads exchange with one another when they meet?

A reporter answered a phone in a local city room the other night and was asked "What is the name of the tender to which the dirigible Los Angeles is attached?" . . . Without even stopping to take the cigarette from between his lips the bright young reporter replied, "The Patoka!" . . . Drop around to the Somerset on the eve of June 19; there'll be big doin's an' a swell time . . . How can some guys feel comfortable when they wad their handkerchief in their breast pocket? . . . I gotta flatten mine out to feel at ease . . . Has anybody met anybody who didn't tell them what they'd do with the money if they won the Derby prize?

Who's the Hosmer st., Mattapan, songbird who refuses bribes to refrain from warbling? . . . There's a new-born baby boy in town who will be saddled with the front name of "Shakespeare" if his ma doesn't welch on her bet . . . She was so sure she was gonna have a girl that she bet the hubby she'd tack on the above appellation if it turned out to be a male . . . When will outsiders get over the popular idea that reporters just saunter around town looking for news with their pencils over their ears and notebooks in their hands? . . . And what school grad doesn't vow about this time of the year to come back and visit the teachers . . . and never does get around to it? . . . There's a white wing in town who's a dead ringer for Heywood Broun.

Discovered, a letter 6000 years old! Scientists who have examined it state that it was written about 4000 years B. C. Read about it in the American Weekly section of the next Boston Sunday Advertiser.

DRUG PARLEY IN A FLURRY OVER U. S. PROPOSAL

Universal Service Cable.

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service.

Geneva, June 8—Did you ever see what happens in a nice, cozy, safe, little chicken yard when a swift, sharp-eyed, strong-taloned hawk appears in the air?

If you have you can picture just what happened at the international narcotic conference of the League of Nations this morning when H. J. Anslinger of the American delegation arose and offered an amendment to the Japanese plan limitation—yet all that amendment means is that no manufacturing country shall import more raw material than actually required for legitimate trade.

The Anslinger amendment will help prevent over-manufacture and that is all it will do.

OPEN DOOR WINS

The amendment was introduced at a quiet little committee meeting which began under the promise of closed doors.

M. Bogomoloff, the Russian delegate, asked that the doors be kept open. John K. Caldwell of the American delegation asked that all the meetings be open and said he had come to the conference with the understanding that open covenants were to be arrived at openly.

A vote was taken on the open or shut door and the open door won with reservations.

The general meetings of the committee will be open, but, of course some meetings will be declared private—how can the public possibly be interested in that and the price of raw opium and the finished products? Sometimes the names of illicit factories are mentioned in such meetings—who would not draw the veil over such painful scenes?

SCURRY TO COVER

The committee began by a discussion of the Japanese plan of limitation on harmful drugs and all went smoothly until Anslinger held up his hand and said:

"Just a minute please," and then proposed his plain, simple amendment.

Delegate after delegate jumped to his feet and protested, some on one ground and some on another, but nobody wanted the American amendment to go through. It was striking at the very roots of the trade.

After various declamatory speeches the conference adjourned to think it over, but not before Malcolm Delveigne, delegate from Great Britain, murmured something about the injustice of shutting out morphine and cocaine when some new kind of manufacturer might want to convert them into non-noxious drugs.

I wonder if Malcolm meant codein, perhaps heroin—I should like to ask him what non-noxious drug can be made from morphine and what good it would be anyhow.

How much dope does the world really need, how much does it manufacture and what becomes of the surplus?

HEARST RELIEF PLAN EXALTED BY CONNERY

William Randolph Hearst's proposal for a $5,000,000,000 bond issue by the federal government to relieve economic depression and unemployment, delivered in a nation-wide broadcast on June 2, was given approval today by Congressman William P. Connery of Lynn.

Congressman Connery said:

"In his nation-wide broadcast Mr. Hearst unerringly placed his finger upon the pulse of the American people and offered a sure remedy for the depression.

"His suggestion that the government offer a $5,000,000,000 bond issue and that the money derived therefrom be used for an extensive public building program finds a ready response among thinking men and women who study the nation's needs.

"Mr. Hearst's suggestion to wipe out the folly of prohibition and replace it with sane legislation putting the government in charge of liquor, thereby eliminating the present farce, meets with my sincere approval.

"Mr. Hearst rendered to the people of America an invaluable service when he made his brilliant and outspoken broadcast. What a happy thought in these days of passing trial to know we still have men who so love their country that they search out the truth and have the interests of the nation at heart enough to suggest a logical remedy for some of the ills which beset us."

Labor Paper Praises Hearst Economic Plan

Washington, June 8—William Randolph Hearst's recent radio broadcast in favor of high-wage standards and a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan won high commendation today from Labor, official organ of the railroad brotherhoods.

Mr. Hearst was particularly endorsed by Labor for his vigorous condemnation of wage cutting and his plea for continuing the American standard of living. Asserting that wage-slashing is being attempted in many industries, Labor said:

"The burden of resisting this movement has fallen upon organized labor, but for once it is not compelled to fight a lone hand. On the contrary, it is receiving wonderful support from several courses, and the stand taken by influential newspapers is one of the most gratifying and significant developments of a troubled economic era.

"Last week William Randolph Hearst, in a radio hookup, swung into line in fine shape.

"The publisher predicted that if employers persisted in their 'insane policy' of lowering American living standards, trouble of the most serious character may be expected. He called for an immediate federal expenditure of $5,000,000,000 on public works."

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

What is the effect of irritation upon the throat? Here are the exact words of a noted authority retained by us to study this question. He writes:

"First, the vocal chords, on account of their delicacy of structure, would be the first tissues to give indication of irritation, evidenced by the huskiness of the smoker's voice, the result of relaxed tension and slower vibration of the vocal chords. The next site of irritation would be the tissues adjacent to the vocal chords comprising the larynx, therefore the general focal point of the irritation would be in the voice box represented externally by the Adam's Apple."

So—Consider your Adam's Apple. Be careful in your choice of cigarettes. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants. Reach for a LUCKY instead.

FINISHING SCHOOLS FOR EVERYBODY; COLLEGES FOR THE BRAINY

By ROBERT E. ROGERS

ROBERT E. ROGERS

APPARENTLY THE COLLEGE GIRLS of Jugoslavia are not so different from our own high school girls, in spite of all we are told about the greater maturity and seriousness of European students. Over here it is a commonplace to read of high school girls who have to be sent home because their fool parents allow them to show up at school in sun-back suits, or beach pajamas, or street pajamas, or dancing pajamas, or whatever European nonsense the New York garment confectioners have copied to catch the dollars of those of our working girls who have no sense of what clothes are or not proper for the office and the street.

"We refuse to be educated by anti-diluvian methods," the Belgrade girls are reported as manifesto-ing. "We think that red-colored lips, polished finger-nails and undulated bobbed hair are more important than Greek and Latin and the rest of the trash. We do not want to look ugly like our grandmothers. We want to marry. We shall get a good husband without any degrees rather than without a good make-up."

Finishing Schools for All!

If the girls are quoted correctly, there will be thousands of American high school girls, and even college girls, to agree with them. And they are probably perfectly right. There are thousands of them, bound to high school until they are of legal age to leave it, or trying to struggle through college, for whom formal education is about as useless as anything could be. Wealthy girls without intellectual aptitudes are allowed to go to finishing schools, where they may learn the ropes of social life. But there are the hundreds of thousands of girls who will have to learn some simple skill by which to earn a living for a few years until they marry and set themselves to keep house and raise a family. Why shouldn't they have their own "finishing schools," where they may learn those things which are now, or will be, all important to them? How to keep young and attractive, how to dress properly, how to cook real food instead of canned goods and delicatessen fodder, how to play bridge and drive a car, and make a home that looks like the colored advertisements in the magazines.

For People With Brains

Colleges are for people with brains! But the rest of the world needs its own kind of education, as the Belgrade girls realize.

And some day many of them will realize what they have missed and turn to the education which in their youth they were not mature enough for. They will go in for adult education—and profit by it.

I have just finished another season of University Extension. Thirty-two consecutive weeks of evening study for hard-working people who want to do something more with their evenings than see movies interminably or play cards or just go places.

At the beginning of the year there were, in my evening class, about a thousand of them. The other night some three or four hundred of them finished the course—a perfectly normal percentage. Of those some fifty took the examinations—again perfectly normal. These men and women had read during the course some thirty volumes, good, stiff, classical stuff, had written some twenty or twenty-five thousand words of written work and had taken four examinations. And nearly all of them, after a long, hard day in the public schools, in the office, or in the home—which is perhaps harder than the other two. I have no words to express my admiration for the energy, the perseverance, the patience, and the ambition of some of these people.

A university extension class is the most interesting cross-section of American life that I know. College classes, in comparison, are standardized and monotonous. Extension classes are probably more intelligent than most church congregations, infinitely more intelligent than most theater audiences.

Young men in business, young women in business, some college graduates, mostly not. Boys more interested than the girls they bring with them, girls more interested than the boys they bring with them. Young couples who have left baby at home. Girls in groups, young men in groups with an eye for one other. School teachers, lots of them, some merely intent on the necessary promotional credits, others thirsty for the college education they never had. Middle-aged or elderly gentlewomen, well educated, refreshing their memories of their younger days, well read, up to the minute. Professional men, doctors, lawyers, important officials at the State House, an occasional priest or clergyman. Mothers with grown-up sons. Elderly gentlemen with their wives.

They Have Waked Up

The young French woman doing professional journalistic work. The good-looking young man in a raccoon coat who spent a worried evening, some months ago, with the corridor filled with plainclothes men peering at him on suspicion that he might be a much-wanted young man from Fall River. He wasn't. The girl who had broken her engagement and came because there wasn't anything else to do evenings and who slept peacefully in the seat next to my wife. The shrewd and jolly officer at the door knows them all, looks over their papers and gives them experienced advice.

That is only one class. There are hundreds of them, all over the city, all over the state, to say nothing of the large numbers of students who never attend a class but who work at home alone and send in their papers weekly to be read and corrected at the State House. These are the people who have waked up. They may have missed their opportunities when they were younger; they may have neglected their chances, like those girls in Belgrade and the children who are perfectly willing to be excluded from school because they can't wear pajamas to class. Or they may simply have matured, to the point where they are ready for education. But they have waked up now!

At 10 o'clock the other evening they quit for the season. But they will be back next October, refreshed by vacations but a little bored after a summer of casual occupation. And we shall have to be ready for them, with something fresh and interesting. Practical training, cultural background, food for the mind, refreshment for the spirit—for these things the supply never equals the demand.

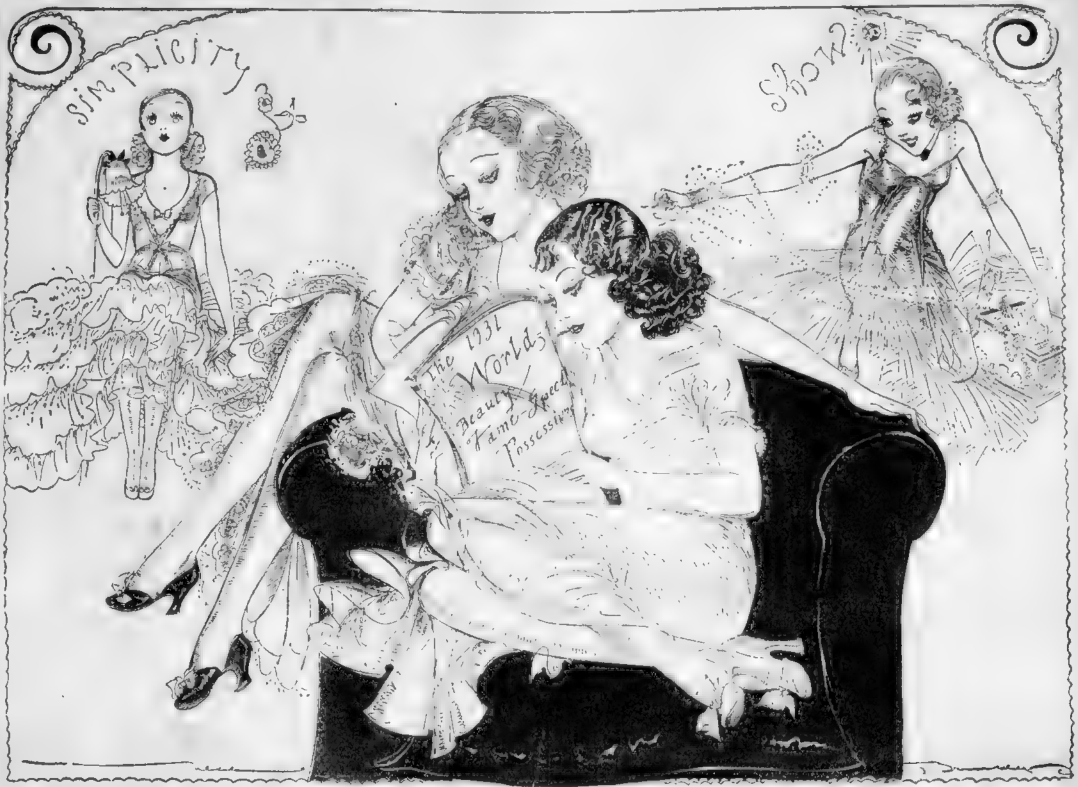
"BLACK AND GOLD"

DRAWN BY

Nell Brinkley



Black hair and gold hair wonder if all the world was ALWAYS a puzzle to the young! Thinking back, we know our mothers when young, by the remarks they made, seemed to find it so. If "slang" is any key to the problem, the world must then always have been full of confusing knots just as it is now, for slang has been with us since we left the hairy ancestor who drew pics upon cave-walls behind. In the dear old days when young gentlemen strolled in the evening upon the sidewalks of "Bowling Green" the word was "doe" instead of "dame." And can you see anything less offensive in the first than in the last?

Which is it to be—Simplicity, or Show? "The world is a-flare with Show," says Black-hair. "What if it is—" says Gold, "if we ourselves like to be Simple. Not simple-minded my dear—for a girl who is alive at all these times CAN'T be simple-minded! Not Smug—nor mincing—nor pragmatic . . . but just plain person . . . if that's what we like best to be!"

It is hard for Youth to be itself—if that self rouses any ridicule among the showy-minded.

But if you honestly don't like to drink—to pet—to do showy things—be a big brave girl and say so.

It's grand to be yourself, even if that self is kinda plain!

GIRL BLOCKED IN SUICIDE

Miss Susan M. Carcelo, 17, of Park ave., Cambridge, drank poison last night while walking on the Charles River Upper rd., Watertown, and was rushed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Brighton, where she is recovering.

Police of the Charles River Speedway station of the Metropolitan police say that the girl took poison because of a quarrel with her sweetheart.

Her plight was discovered by Maynard E. Knight, a Boy Scout of West Poland, Me., who happened to be passing and saw the girl leaning against a tree.

DAILY TRUE STORY

"FALSELY CALLED LOVE"

PETER TOLD LEILA HE WAS BUYING A RING

THERE ARE a lot of strange crimes committed in the name of devotion—big ones and little ones—but all the objects of the selfish affection falsely called love don't escape so easily as Leila Redpath.

For Peter Neary may have gone wrong but at least he had a spark of decency for the girl to whom he had been engaged and for whom he had stolen to buy an engagement ring.

When he was sent away Leila wept bitter tears, not so much because he was being sent up the river as because she had trusted him and found him wanting.

That's what hurt—he knew she was all alone in New York and earning her living in a typist's job in a downtown bank and yet he had betrayed her trust.

It was all the more bitter because she couldn't understand now how he had ever managed to deceive her. But Leila wasn't wholly to blame for that. Peter would have deceived almost anybody; he wasn't one of these roughnecks who pose as men of the world, he was quiet and mannerly; he dressed in good taste; and he told her his one desire in life was to see her happy.

Leila believed him. Then Peter lost his job and found it impossible to get another. He didn't tell Leila and meanwhile she went on talking as though things were rosy and they were to be married in June just as they had planned.

That was where Peter was tempted—he hadn't given Leila an engagement ring, and she wanted one—and he wanted to give her one and he hadn't the money to buy one.

He was walking along Park ave. one evening at dusk when he saw a parked car and inside a woman's shopping bag. It was just a gamble on his part. He reached in and abstracted the bag and walked away without being seen.

Several Bills
And All Brand New

Inside the bag were several good-sized bills all brand new. Pete threw away the bag and counted the money. All told there were two hundred odd dollars. The first thing he thought of was Leila's engagement ring.

It should come from a fine shop, too. He felt like a millionaire when he went in to purchase the ring. He was strangely callous too, to the tragedy that he was ready to inflict on Leila.

The clerk counted the new bills several times and glanced queerly at him, but Peter didn't notice that. "You'll want the ring marked, of course," said the clerk. "That won't take long, suppose you leave it and you can call for it in a few days."

He didn't even ask for Peter's address—just his name.

When Peter told Leila that he was buying her a ring she was delighted. Happiness beamed from her blue eyes and found expression in the rapturous kiss she gave him.

Neither of them had noticed an inconspicuous ad in the lost and found columns of the daily papers. It recounted simply the theft of a bag from a limousine and offered a reward for the return of its contents.

But the clerk in the jewelry shop saw it and noted the initials and eyed the amount of the reward.

When Peter came to claim the ring he asked him to step inside the manager's private office for a minute, the light was so much better there, and when Peter was inside he produced the ring and introduced a gentleman who had nothing to do with rings and jewels.

Pertinent Query
Whence Came the Money?

"May I ask," inquired this man of Peter, "where you got the bills to pay for this ring?"

"Is that any of your business?" asked Peter, who was secretly alarmed nevertheless.

"It may be," said the other, "the point is—that I'm afraid unless you can explain satisfactorily—I'll have to place you under arrest."

Peter paled. He was not a gunman and he'd never carried a pistol. His agitation was not lost on the detective but he persisted that he had come by the money honestly and in the end he was forced to submit to a trip to headquarters where he had to tell his story over again.

"We don't want to be hard on you," said the second inquisitor, a white-haired, pleasant-faced official, "but we know you're lying. You probably yielded to an impulse—it wasn't a good impulse but still—now we have looked up your record and found out nothing against you, but you've been out of work and, as I reconstruct the case, you wanted to show off to Miss Redpath."

"For God's sake," cried Peter, "do you have to drag Leila into it?"

"I'm afraid so," said the police official," we'll have to bring her into court to testify that you promised her a ring."

"Court," echoed Peter, "drag Leila to court?"

Peter Tells All
On a Police Promise

"Naturally, she'll want to help [illegible] all she can and yet—she seems like such a nice girl it's a shame to make her suffer all this disgrace."

"I'll tell you," said Peter suddenly, "I'll tell you the whole thing if you'll promise she won't have to figure in it at all."

"OK," said the other, "spill it."

And Peter told the story much as it's been told here.

"My boy," said the inquisitor when Peter had finished, "I'm sorry for you, but it's a good thing for the girl that she didn't marry you; you'll have to be tried in the regular way but the girl needn't enter into it."

"Thanks," gulped Peter.

After the short trial and the plea of guilty and just before he was sent over the Bridge of Sighs preparatory to starting up the river he asked the lawyer assigned to defend him how the police had traced the money. It had all been so mysterious.

The lawyer told him.

"Well you see those bills were all new, three fifties and five tens and it was your bad luck that the very clerk who waited on you had given eight bills just like those to the woman whose purse you stole. How did he know they were hers? He saw her ad and the store detective did a little sleuthing. Is it clear now?"

HOTEL MEN PUT ON PROBATION

John J. Scanlon and Anthony T O'Malley, both of Clinton, were placed on probation in Federal Court today after a common nuisance charge had been preferred against the New City Hotel, Worcester, of which they are owners, as the result of a liquor seizure there.

John Hanlon of Worcester, a clerk in the hotel, was fined $250 and given a suspended sentence of six months in jail when he pleaded guilty to a charge of liquor law violation.

Party in Cottage Costs Two $25 Each

The automobile registration of Elden M Keith of Ashmont st., Dorchester, found in a cottage on Sea st., Quincy, resulted in the appearance in Quincy court today of himself and Mozart Benn of Quincy on charges of trespassing and injuring property.

According to the police, the two men went to the cottage, owned by Joseph Rogers, and used it for a party without first obtaining permission. Both men were found guilty and paid fines of $25.

YOUTH BETTER THAN EVER—MRS. ROOSEVELT

WIFE OF N. Y. GOVERNOR HAS ENDED VISIT

Tells How Present Generation Makes 'Friends Without Fear' of Easier-Going Parents

"Young America is little different today than it was 40 years ago and what difference there may be is all for the best."

So says Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the New York governor, who left Boston today after a visit here with her son, Eliot.

She hurried to Boston on receiving word that he was ill and spent her entire time here at his side in the Cambridge home of his brother James, a Boston University law school student. Eliot has recovered and returned to New York.

Mrs. Roosevelt scouted the idea that the present younger generation is any more disrespectful to parents or headed more obliquely for the "crimson path" than the generation of the 90's.

OLD ORDER CHANGES

"You see," she explained, "the only difference is in the openness of mind in this day and age. We mothers and fathers have realized that our children are going to express themselves whether we like it or not.

"In the old days a father demanded austerely that his children eat out of his hand, like lambs led to the slaughter. They couldn't speak unless spoken to.

"The result was that they did just what they wanted to do—secretly.

"Nowadays our youngsters argue with us, disobey us when they see fit, treat us like children, too.

"The result is that they do just what they want to do—right out in the open. They are active, aspiring, determined to accomplish their aims, and established on a much friendlier basis with their parents than we were with ours.

"Of course, both parents and children are living at a much faster pace in this day and age. At times much too fast. I am inclined to believe that if the pace continues, our country will suffer the fate of Rome at its hey-day. We are sitting on top of the world now, but we don't want to let it go to our heads."

Mrs. Roosevelt will return to Boston with Governor Roosevelt on Thursday. The governor will stay overnight in the city and then travel to Groton to deliver an address at the Groton Academy on Friday.

CITY BALKS AT SERVICE CHARGE

Corporation Counsel Samuel Silverman today demanded that the public utilities commission rescind its order of August, 1929, in which it allowed Boston Consolidated Gas Co. to put into effect a service charge of 50 cents to householders.

This sum is paid by consumers in addition to what they pay for gas consumed. Atty. Silverman's demand came during a hearing before the public utilities commission on petition of Charlestown and Somerville customers that the service charge be done away with.

Scot Glad to Pay Costs, but Fine? No!

In a rich, heather accent, Joseph H. Smith of Belmont publicly acclaimed pleasure at spending $5 today in Cambridge court as long as it wasn't in the form of a fine. Smith was found guilty of failing to stop his car at a through street.

"I'll file this case, but must assess you cost of $5," Judge Louis Green said in disposition.

"I'll gladly pay it as long as it isn't a fine," Smith replied. And court clerks wondered.

Senate Retracts on Juvenile Bill Vote

On motion of Senator Holmes of Weymouth and without debate the Senate today reconsidered its action in passing for engrossment the bill extending the jurisdiction of juvenile courts over children who pass the maximum age limit in respect to the complaint or proceeding to which such limit applies. On motion of Holmes, the matter was then referred to the next annual session.

MORE SCHOOLS FIRE TRAPS

Wooden fire escapes on public schools.

Boston has plenty of them, although the average person cannot imagine them being made of such material.

In its continued survey in behalf of more and better school accommodations for the children of this city the Boston Evening American found wooden fire escapes on the Abram F. Cutter school in Medford st., Charlestown.

There is one wooden fire escape on the front of this building and another on the rear. The building also is constructed of wood and is two stories high. It was built 45 years ago.

HOUSES 100 CHILDREN

One hundred young children are housed in this antiquated school, there being two third grades containing 60 children and two classes in electricity and wood-working. One of the industrial groups is taught on the second floor.

Not only has this obsolete wooden building wooden fire escapes but the structure is badly in need of white-washing and painting and the teachers in the building admit it. The condemned latrine system of sanitation is also in vogue there. During recent heavy rains the roof leaked, thus adding to the discomforts of children and teachers.

Roslindale has an obsolete school in the old Phineas Bates structure in Beech st., built 35 years ago. This building is a two-story wooden affair containing four classes of primary grade children.

FIRE ESCAPE INSIDE

It contains 125 children in special speech improvement class and fourth and fifth grades. Being of all wood construction this building is a third class structure.

There is an iron fire escape in a brick well inside the building with entrances from the top hallway and two exits. Many parents believe this school should have fire escapes on the exterior of the building if it is to be retained.

The new Phineas Bates school, adjoining the old school is without fire escapes. It is a three-story brick building with a hall on the top floor. It contains 12 class rooms of 500 children ranging from kindergarten to sixth grade.

Vermont Senator Argues in Dispute

United States Senator Warren R. Austin of Vermont today continued his argument in the Boston federal building before a master in proceedings to settle the boundary between Vermont and New Hampshire, which has been in dispute 178 years.

He contended the real boundary line between the states lies in the center of the Connecticut River. He quoted many exhibits, including a petition filed long ago by John Willard, to prove his contention that the "thread" of the Connecticut River is the true boundary. The New Hampshire contention is that its territory extends to the west bank of the river. Edward Trabue is hearing the case.

Father Finigan Gaining Ground

The Rev. William B. Finigan, pastor of the Blessed Sacrament Church, Pearl st., Cambridgeport, is reported today as improving. He is suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Greylock Award Made

The Mt. Greylock War Memorial Commission today announced it has unanimously voted to award the contract for the construction of the state beacon memorial to J. G. Roy & Sons Co. of Springfield, the lowest bidder. Bid was $146,000.

SENATE DITCHES ALL RAIL BILLS

A movement to halt so-called "penetration" of the New England railroad field by the Pennsylvania and other big trunk lines was sidetracked by the Senate today until the next annual session.

Bills limiting residents of other states from voting on more than 10 per cent of their stock held in Massachusetts railroad corporations and requiring the disclosure of the actual ownership of stock in Massachusetts railroad corporations had passed the House by scant margins but were sent over to the next legislature by the Senate today.

Senator Fish, Brookline, moved that the two measures be referred to the next annual session. There was no debate and the motions of the Brookline member carried on voice votes.

In making the motion Senator Fish held it would not be advisable to pass the measures because prorogation was due either tomorrow or Thursday and there was not sufficient time to adequately consider the railroad problem.

Alcohol Does Not Harden Arteries, Says Dr. Leary

Instead of causing hardening of the arteries, alcohol in some instances has served as a preventive, Dr. Timothy Leary, Suffolk County medical examiner, told the Massachusetts Medical Society at its meeting today.

He declared the use of alcohol in the treatment of the sick had no relation to prohibition.

"The infrequency of gall stones in alcoholics," he said, "seems to suggest that alcohol may, through its solvent action, prevent the precipitation of cholesterol, the fatty substance which makes up most of the gall stones. The picture of the abuse of alcohol cannot be painted too black. There are no gray tints."

CLERK HELD AS LETTER THIEF

Charged with the theft of mailable matter, Lindsay H. Ralph, 38, married, living in Ripley street, Newton Centre, and employed as clerk in the Newton Centre branch of the Boston postoffice, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before Commissioner Goodale in Federal court today and was held in $2500 for a hearing later.

When arrested it is alleged he had hidden on his person 27 letters addressed to Brother Fabian of the Working Boys Home, Newton Highlands, four of which were marked "test letters."

Contract Awarded

Contracts for the construction of the Immaculate Conception Boys' high school at the Malden-Medford line has been awarded to Thomas O'Connor Co. of Boston. The school will cost about $100,000.

BAY STATE MAN FLEES REDS

Communists invading the Shaowu mission area, Fukien, China, of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, have caused the evacuation of Rev. Edwin D. Kellogg of Orange, according to a cable received today from James H. McCann of Foochow.

Kellogg returned two months ago to Yangkow, which is the head of water navigation for that area, and has been co-operating with the Chinese Christian churches in carrying on work.

"According to last reports, there are nothing but local non-Communist groups of bandits between Yangkow and the coast, so that Mr. Kellogg would seem to be in no unusual personal danger," said Dr. Wynn C. Fairfield, foreign secretary of the American Board in charge of China [illegible]k.

OFFICER 'LOST' FOR 4 DAYS

A quiet police search has been conducted throughout the city for four days for Patrolman Thomas E. Griffin of the Back Bay station, missing since Saturday.

Griffin, who figured in a shooting affray in the Old Timers' club in Andrew sq on Evacuation Day, was still doing 210 hours' punishment duty imposed for his share in the affair. And he has been despondent.

His status as a reinstated officer was in doubt as a result of a legal tilt between Commissioner Hultman and the Civil Service Commission over the priority right in suspending and reinstating policemen.

WOODEN FIRE ESCAPES IMPERIL PUPILS

SAYS OFFICER WAS TOLD TO PUT UP HANDS

Tells Jury They Were Out to Steal Automobile When O'Brien Arrived

The story of the slaying of Patrolman Joseph O'Brien was retold in Dedham court today by Thomas G. Healy, erstwhile "pal" of Paul V. Hurley, Roxbury youth, charged with the crime.

Healey's account deviated in no detail from that previously given by Albert W. Daniels, from whose car the officer stepped on the night of August 3, 1930, to face the bullets of a suspected auto thief.

Healey, appearing as a state witness, related the movements of the pair on the night of the slaying when, he said, Hurley took him out to teach him how to "pick up some easy money." Their object that night, he said, was to steal an automobile.

"We walked through several streets—I don't remember the names," Healey said. "We finally reached Ivy st., after trying the locks of several automobiles.

"We finally came to what I know now was Ivy st. Hurley kidded me about my nervousness, and together we tried the door on a car at the curb.

"Then I noticed a car coming toward us, and when it drew near I saw a policeman in it.

"'What are you fellows doing?' the officer asked and then got out of the car and came toward us.

'He frisked me, and then turned to Hurley. Hurley said, 'Put up your hands!'

"Then I saw two flashes and heard two shots. The officer fell and we separated and ran."

Healey and Hurley next met the following morning, the witness said, in Hurley's apartment.

Here, according to Healey, Hurley again ridiculed his attack of nerves and his protests against the wanton shooting of O'Brien. Healey pictured his former schoolchum as cool and collected and brushing aside the murder as a necessity.

"I shot the copper because I couldn't afford to take a chance," Hurley said, according to Healey.

ESSEX GRAND JURY CALLED

Unfinished business awaiting the Essex County grand jury at Lawrence will compel the calling of a special session next week, it was learned today from an authoritative source.

The case of Ralph W. Punchard, former Salem cashier awaiting trial for embezzlement in Salem jail, will be one of the first presented for consideration by the special session.

James G. McCray, Lynn store manager charged with attacking a Salem girl, will also be spared a summer in jail awaiting trial by the convening of the special session.

Should the two men be indicted they will go to trial immediately before the current session of the Superior Criminal Court at Salem.

OFFICERS DRAG FOR HEIRESS

Police, coast guards and volunteer searchers today dragged East harbor, Provincetown, for the body of Catherine Bill, wealthy Cambridge girl, who eluded a nurse and disappeared Saturday.

Her discarded coat and footprints described as "staggering," led to the search of the harbor in the belief that she wandered or plunged into the water.

Alexander Bill, Boston coffee merchant and father of the girl, watched the operations anxiously.

Clad only in light summer clothing and the topcoat that was found last night, the girl is believed to have wandered through the neighboring woods during two cold dreary and rainy nights.

Search on land was not abandoned, however. Boy Scouts and friends of the family continued to slosh through rain-soaked brush and woods for a trace of the girl.

She was reported seen yesterday by one of the boy searchers, who said she fled from him.

LINDYS TEST PLANE FOR PACIFIC HOP

Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh had added weight in the form of two summonses when they went aloft at North Beach, L. I., yesterday for a test flight in the plane which they plan to use on their flight to the Orient. One of the summons servers was punched after he served the process. The huge plane, with the new pontoons, is shown in flight, while at the right are the colonel and his flying wife before they went aloft. (Int'l photos.)

TUNE IN ON THESE—SOME "PLATONIC KISSES"

By HELEN ROWLAND

"PLATONIC FRIENDSHIP," these days, means that you've only let the man kiss you for a few hours, every evening just to brighten up his summer.

Middle age is the point at which you can't quite decide whether to take a man's "flattering nothings" as a joke, an insult or a compliment

HELEN ROWLAND.

The old-fashioned girl had a hard time trying to avoid doing anything that would get her talked about; the modern girl, poor thing, has a harder time trying to do something sufficiently new and startling to get herself talked about.

The kind of man who will never admit his faults is not half so hard to live with as the kind who will never stop bragging about them.

If you are looking for happiness, don't marry a man before his character has jelled, his youthful conceit has been boiled down, and his heart has stopped doing flip-flops

Many a man's library is filled with unread books, that he bought because the little saleswoman had "that kind of eyes"—and an old mother or a baby to support.

The average man's habits are like potato bugs; you can't eradicate them; you can't ignore them. You've just got to learn to love 'em.

Love is an emotion, about which most men are curious at 20, critical at 30, cynical at 40—and charmingly credulous at 50

Women's frocks are getting back to the normal waistline; but the men have been fooled so long by the constantly moving waistline that they probably won't remember how to embrace a girl in one of these.

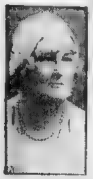
Eagle, Mouse, Choose Your Wrecker!

By WINIFRED BLACK

AN EAGLE or a mouse—which would you hate worse if you were taking a ride in your own nice little airplane?

Am I suddenly bereft of what modicum of senses I ever possessed?



Winifred Black

Not at all. It was all in the news, on the same day.

Prince George Bibesco, over in India, thought he'd have a nice little fly the other morning.

The air was still, the sky was blue and everything was lovely.

Away went the Prince, like the Prince in the old, red fairy book—only the Prince had a flying horse instead of a flying car.

The engine worked perfectly when suddenly—brrrr—came an eagle, a rather large, enthusiastic eagle, which didn't seem to care about airplanes.

The eagle crashed into one of the wings of the airplane and tore the fabric with his strong beak—and down—down—down, fluttered the airplane.

I suppose the eagle went home and told his wife, and the little eaglets that that particular big bird wasn't so much after all. He didn't even try to fight back.

And on the same day, Mr. Oscar Dawson, a perfectly good American airman, was flying at Raleigh, N. C., and a large section of wing fabric tore loose.

Mr. Dawson landed his machine safely.

He wanted to know what was the matter with that wing.

When the wing was ripped open there was a mouse huddled in a nest of threads gnawed from the fabric.

An eagle or a mouse, which would you prefer as an enemy to your airplane if you had to choose between them?

I'd rather be wrecked by an eagle, myself. If I had to be wrecked at all.

There's something sort of romantic and magnificent about an eagle but a mouse oh dear, dear, dear

Somehow when I think about it, I keep remembering a man I know, who has just failed in business.

He won't stay failed very long—it was a bad year and a big competitor got the best of him, and there is a law suit, and a judgment, and bankruptcy proceedings.

Any man may be wrecked in a fight with Big Business—and this particular man won't be wrecked for very long.

But there's the other man who hasn't failed yet—but he's going to fail before very long. It isn't an eagle that's wrecking him and his airplane, it's a Mouse

This particular mouse is the man's wife. She nags him and humiliates him and breaks his spirit till he is not a man any more, he's just a poor, little, timid mouse himself, and then his wife wonders why he's a failure

"I'll take the eagle, thank you, for my airplane—won't you?"

Lorry Had Loved a Memory

LOOK HERE, I only saw Mary Lou twice, once very briefly, but I can understand, I think, what sort of a character she gave me while she was understudying me. Don't delude yourself that I'm like that for, very probably, I'm not. And in a sense, she made me up out of whole cloth, no matter what cues she had from you. She wrote her own part. For the girl you knew in London hadn't much character, to speak of, either good or bad."

After a little silence she went on.

"When she came to me and pitched me that amazing yarn I thought I must be dreaming. I—I wouldn't have considered turning up again. I would have let you all get out of the entanglement as best you could if she had not told me that your mother was very much against having me produced, so to speak. That annoyed me. It would annoy anyone. I don't think, however, I had any particular designs—" she laughed again—"on you or anyone else when I promised Mary Lou to wait a week, while she tried to persuade Mrs. Lorrimer to see what she called 'justice.' She's awfully young. What an idiot you were, Lorry, not to have seen how young she is! You must have thought I'd found the fountain of youth somewhere. Well, I did," she interpolated. "But I came out here out of pure curiosity; I hadn't a thought of crashing the gate. Not I! It was unfortunate, for you, especially, that you are so fond of nature you permit those wood paths of yours to grow hidden roots. I couldn't help turning my idiotic ankle. And that's that."

"Whether you meant to have us find you or not," said Lorrimer, "we have found you."

"If I married you, Lorry—mind you, I'm not saying I shall—I would have your mother's hostility to battle with, all the rest of my life."

She saw the shadows deepen in his eyes and the sudden firmer set to his unsmiling mouth.

"My mother hasn't had a chance to know you yet," he told her quietly. "You must remember that when I returned to her from the war, she had heard nothing from me in months. And I returned pretty much of a wreck, mentally and physically, with just one thought in my mind, to find you again; with the fixed idea that we had been married, that you were my wife. It was considerable of a shock to her; and when, after engaging agents to search for the record of the marriage and for word of you, she discovered absolutely nothing, she quite naturally became convinced that if you ever had existed, you existed no longer, and that we were not married. The deception she and Dr. Mathews undertook when Mary Lou, with her resemblance to you, came here, was undertaken solely because they felt that my condition called for it, and so didn't I suppose, look very far ahead—"

"You don't blame them, then, or her?" she asked, curiously.

"No. Not now. But it couldn't have continued much longer," he answered, staring out of the window at the moving pattern of tree branches against the clear, blue sky. "I think they imagined that, gradually, as I became more like myself, I would remember everything, I would begin to question more closely and perhaps come to the right conclusion by myself. I don't believe, however, that I would have ever done so. I think that the encounter with you was the only cure. Strong medicine," he said, with half a smile. "I wouldn't live again through those few bewildered seconds when I saw you and heard you speak again, for anything I know of. My entire world was turned upside down. There seemed no foothold in it, no sanity. But it was best for us all that it happened."

"Was it? I wonder?" Delight turned her head, forced his eyes down on her own. "Lorry, there's no use being chivalrous and all that. You don't want me. You don't love me. For a time, you loved a memory. But not me."

Tomorrow—Lorry tells Delight he could make her happy if she married him.

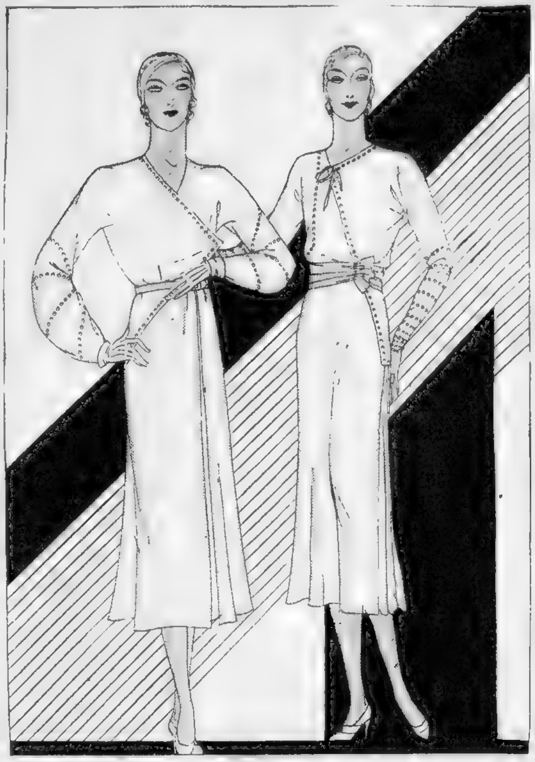
PARIS CALLS IT 'BRODERIE ANGLAISE'

But It's Eyelet Embroidery to You

—SKETCHED IN PARIS—



Creamy white crepe marocain makes the frock and matching wool crepe the coat in the Bruyere ensemble shown in the double sketch. To be wholly up-to-date one must have "broderie anglaise" (eyelet embroidery) on at least one or two costumes this summer, therefore the hand-worked eyelets that trim the sleeves and closing edges of both frock and coat in this ensemble. The skirt of the belted coat is cut frankly circular, whereas the skirt of the frock has its greatest fullness clustered at one side in deep, unpressed folds. The one-sided closing of the neckline of the frock, tied with a tiny bow, is worthy of notice.

Carriers of Disease May Be Immune Themselves

By R. S. COPELAND, M. D.

IN 1904, this country suffered greatly from an epidemic of cerebro-spinal fever. Within five years the disease spread to every part of the world.

Dr. Copeland

Due to energetic measures on the part of the medical profession and public health officials, this disease is now quiescent. It is heard of only in small epidemics and it is hoped that we will never again have the experience of 1904.

Cerebro-spinal fever is a disease caused by the germ known as the "meningococcus." The disease is often confused with meningitis. But meningitis is more common and may be caused by one of a variety of germs. For instance, it may follow infection with the germs of tuberculosis, pneumonia or typhoid fever. Cerebro-spinal fever can only be caused by the meningococcus germ.

The germ enters the body through the lining membrane of the nose and throat. From here it reaches the covering of the brain and spinal cord.

The disease is contracted by actual contact with the germ or with a person harboring the germs. It is quite possible to obtain the disease by indirect contact. It may come from fingers, dishes, any objects or food contaminated by a victim of the disease.

This disease is particularly difficult to control because of the many "carriers" of the infection. A "carrier" is a person who harbors the germs of a disease without knowing it. Though he may appear to be well, he is able to infect others.

It is necessary that all carriers of this disease be recognized and isolated. All local health departments are now instructed in methods of detecting these dangerous persons.

By means of a swab the secretions of the back of the nose and throat may be obtained. These are stained with a special dye and examined for the meningococcus germ. If found to be present, the individual must be isolated and receive treatment.

All persons with the acute disease, just as the "carriers" of the disease, must be isolated. It is imperative that they receive proper care. They must not be discharged from the hospital until definite confirmation of their cure has been made.

With isolation of all fresh cases and care of the "carriers," it is hoped eventually to eradicate this disease.

A.—If eaten in moderation these fruits will not add to the weight. However, grapes are rich in sugar, and therefore fat-producing if eaten in quantity.

Embroidery of Eyelets the Mode

By PARIS BUREAU

PARIS, June 9—If our eyes do get a little weary of looking at frocks and things with eyelet embroidery it won't be our fault. For broderie anglaise peeps forth from everything.

All kinds of day clothes, from simple sports frocks to elaborate afternoon ensembles use this trimming as their sole ornamentation. Very lovely are evening frocks with the eyelets outlined in silver thread or diamante. While daytime clothes use eyelet embroidery with different colors than the dress to provide a clever means of achieving the season's necessary color contrast.

In the accompanying drawing are two views of a most attractive ensemble by the house of Bruyere, famous for its coats and outdoor clothes. The dress is of creamy white crepe marocain, while the coat is of matching wool crepe. As this is a most up-to-date ensemble, we find eyelet embroidery trimming the sleeves and closing edges of both frock and coat. The skirt of the belted coat is cut frankly circular, whereas the skirt of the frock has its greatest fullness clustered at one side in deep unpressed folds. The one-sided closing of the neckline of the frock with its pert little bow is a detail worthy of notice. This is one of the cleverest and most original ensembles noted in any of the new collections and one that appealed to almost every woman who saw it at the initial showing.

Miss Fairfax Tells Her to 'Play Game'

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Last summer I met a young man whom I had been wishing to meet for some time. We went together for a short time and then suddenly he stopped seeing me. Whenever I see him now he acts as if he still cares for me. Recently I met a girl who said she had seen and talked with him. He told her I took everything he said too seriously, and that he only cared for me as a friend. As I love this man dearly, I felt very much hurt. I cannot seem to interest myself in anyone else.

B. H.

Dear B. H.: You've got to learn what's known as playing the game. And among the rules, not the least important, is the one not to wear your heart on your sleeve and let this young man see how much you care about him. He probably is not in a position to marry and he is scared to death by the prospect of having a girl hanging on his every word. Take a brace, and don't show you care. This doesn't mean "cutting him" or acting upstage. When you meet, be natural and, if you can manage to show an interest in someone else—real or assumed—it would be a good thing.

That Ended It—

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Three years ago I met a young man who was very popular on account of his looks. He showed me he loved me and, when he asked me to kiss him, I did. Ever since, whenever I ask him and his friends to go riding, he gives me some excuse and usually leaves. What can the matter be—how shall I act—what shall I tell him?

WAITING.

Dear Waiting: The young man probably disapproved of kissing even though he suggested it. They are like that sometimes. If, as you say, he's very popular on account of his appearance, no doubt he is thoroughly spoiled. The medicine he needs is a good dose of indifference.

EXPANSION OF RUBBER AREA IS PLANNED

By FRANK H. MELOON

Some stockholders in the big rubber companies have expressed the belief that money was wasted when American firms planted big tracts with rubber trees when rubber was selling at several times the prices of today. The big rubber men do not feel that way about it. Henry Ford a while ago denied planning to abandon his rubber projects in South America.

Harvey S. Firestone's big tire and rubber company, which has a subsidiary with 43,000 acres planted in Liberia, announces it will add to its plantings this year. Such action can only mean that able rubber men have found promise of profit in rubber growing. The Firestone concession in Liberia has plenty of chance to expand, since it covers a million acres.

Harvey S. Firestone

The Firestone Liberian concession is representative of a $100,000,000 investment. The Firestone company also has a large rubber acreage in Mexico. The Firestone ramifications are far-reaching. Mr. Firestone heads a subsidiary plant at Hudson, in the Bay State and also the Firestone Cotton Mills in the Fall River-New Bedford area.

These Firestone Cotton Mills, making tire fabric, contain the world's largest spinning room. There is a growing potential demand for replacement tires. Goodyear has found it necessary to keep up production, as have also some other plants. Stocks of crude rubber in London are lower than a week ago. Shipments of tires for the last recorded monthly period show an increase of nearly 20 per cent.

Many will be surprised to learn that a city real estate company had larger profits in 1930 than in 1929. A report made public shows however, that the Hufvudstaden Real Estate Company, the biggest owner of city real estate in Boston and controlled by Boston-listed Kreuger & Toll Company has declared a dividend for 1930 at 8 per cent, or at the same rate as for 1929. The profits for 1930 were slightly in excess of those for 1929.

The company owns 87 buildings in Sweden most of which are in Stockholm. The company has played a leading part in developing one of the new streets of Stockholm, Kungsgatan, which in the last 10 years has become the main thoroughfare of Stockholm. In connection with the work done by the company in this respect a considerable increase in the value of the properties owned by the company has taken place.

Farm Board explanation that changes to office work and quick lunches account for falling off in meat consumption is criticized in State Street as unconvincing.

Continued widespread talk of railroad rate increase is bullish ammunition and mostly talk. The latest rumor was that the higher rates would be effective by July 1. Railroad people laugh at such an idea, but it has some psychological influence. Well informed transportation men state it will take several months before rate advances can be negotiated and put into effect.

"Gross revenues of the New Haven Railroad in May were about 15½ per cent below the same month last year," said President J. J. Pelley. "According to carloadings figures received thus far in June, traffic is moving this month at about the same rate as in May."

The last six months of the year are always the best for the New Haven.

Crosley Radio Has Increase in Sales

Sales of Crosley Radio Corp. since January have been showing increasingly better comparisons with the 1930 periods. Sales to May 23 totaled $2,531,000 against $2,111,000 the like period 1930. Sales to the 23d were $291,000, against $241,000 for full month of May a year ago.

Today's News of Live Stocks in Wall Street

Trading continued dull and with few outstanding features in Wall st today. Lifting of bearish pressure was evident with upturns in the mercantile stocks and a few of the rails. Profit-taking in early trading was readily absorbed, but the later profit-taking and short selling was less well received.

The Chicago situation influenced afternoon selling.

New York Central Has Good Action

Food Stocks Are in Good Demand

The food stocks including Gold Dust, General Foods and Coca-Cola, were in good demand today.

Jersey Standard Is Leader of Oils

Shorts Covering Allied Chemical

Covering by shorts in Allied Chemical today quickly sent that issue up $4 a share. Improvement in "ACD" business has been widely forecast.

Woolworth Leader of Rally in Group

Woolworth was the leader of a mild rally today in the store stocks. The rise came with the issuance of prospectus on the British Woolworth offering which, like Ford of England, is expected to be well taken in the United States.

U. S. Steel Has Sharp Advance

U. S. Steel showed a sharp advance today after an early reaction, and in jig time was up 2 points from its low with a good turnover. The stock has been anticipating a statement this week showing a reduction in unfilled tonnage. While large, this will be less than the average for a five-year period at this season.

Vacuum-Socony Decision a Help

The recent announcement of the decision of the Government not to appeal the decision favoring the merger of Vacuum with Standard of New York, has improved sentiment towards this group. Vacuum reached a high today that was an advance over the bear market low reached last week. Gulf Oil of Pennsylvania, Humble, Standard of Ohio and Standard of Indiana all rose.

Chrysler's Second Quarter Earnings

Although Chrysler reported a deficit for first quarter, there are predictions of a good showing in the current three months. Some estimates in Wall st have been that as much as 90 cents a share will be shown. More importance is being attached to the strong financial position of the company. At the end of last year current assets were $74,028,993, against current liabilities of $11,454,731, leaving a net working capital of $62,574,262, which was equal to more than $14 a share on the stock.

Foreign News Has Little Influence

Foreign news exerted little influence on stock quotations. The week-end apparently developed a more unified thought that, unless the German moratorium is extended into private obligations the effects of the threatened action may be much less severe than previously feared.

American Can Is Bulwark of Bulls

American Can was utilized by the bull forces as the bulwark of their campaign against the still stubborn shorts. Can is called the particular current favorite of William Danforth, who is reputed to be the most aggressive individual now operating on the constructive side of the market.

The Boston ex-bear is receiving an unusual amount of assistance from the usually reticent American Can management, which has again reiterated its belief that 1931 results will approximate those for last year.

Crop Failure Yarn Brings C. P. Selling

Selling has been coming to Canadian Pacific in rather heavy volume. A considerable portion of the supply has been from Canada and, according to advices received here, it is based on a yarn of prospects for a crop failure in the Dominion which would seriously affect the traffic and earnings of the road. Canadian Pacific is still selling at an unusually low yield basis when compared with some of the standard domestic carriers and quite a few observers have been switching customers out of the stock.

Best & Co.'s New Store

Two new stores have been opened in the past two weeks by Best & Co. One is at Atlantic City and the other at Hyannis, Mass. In view of the successes of the resort branch stores opened in the past two years, interest in the company are known to be optimistic on the prospects at the latest additions. Because the company is earning its dividend about twice over it is one of the stocks which has been included in most of the lists recommending scale purchases during reactions.

Manville Pool Very Aggressive

Sizable recovery in Johns-Manville was chiefly reflective of aggressive operations by the recently organized pool which has extended no quarter to the substantial short account in the stock.

SAYS UTILITIES ARE LITTLE IMPAIRED

Atlantic City, N. J., June 9 (AP)—W. Alton Jones, president of the National Electric Light Association, said today the light and power industry had weathered the depression without serious impairment to its financial structure, or great diminution of its productive power.

Answering attacks on industry Mr Jones charged that the country's political institutions had become one of the greatest burdens taxpayers had to bear.

Comparing reports of more than 600 corporations for the first three months of 1930 and 1931, Mr. Jones pointed out that, while the earnings of 250 industrial corporations, taken as a whole were 54.8 per cent under those of the previous year and 171 railroads showed a decrease of 39.3 per cent, the light, power and gas companies showed a decrease of only 1.6 per cent.

He attributed the condition in the light and power industry to the careful control and direction of the capital investment along sound economic lines—regional grouping, interconnection of independently-owned power transmission lines research and development work and perfection of equipment.

Emphasizing that light and power rates have steadily declined during the past 30 years, Mr. Jones said:

"An examination of the record shows that the amount of electricity used by domestic consumers in 1930 would have cost $150,000,000 more in 1920, $300,000,000 more in 1910, $800,000,000 more in 1900 and $1,250,000 more in 1890.

"While the domestic consumption has increased more than 60 times in the past 40 years, the total domestic bill of the nation has increased less than 20 times."

STATE STREET SIDELIGHTS

The trading market which was expected by many State st. brokers seems to be developing and, barring any unexpected news, they think a favorable opportunity to purchase stocks will be presented late today or early Wednesday. It is the consensus of opinion, however that long positions should be protected by stop loss orders.

The caution which tempers buying advice is based for the most part on the chance mid-week news from the steel centers and railroad meetings may induce sufficient profit-taking and short-selling to turn prices down through old lows. A dividend cut by the New York Central tomorrow is expected and a sharp drop in unfilled steel tonnage looked for.

Many good bank shares whose dividends are not in danger of being reduced are now selling at prices where the income is comparable to that obtainable on second grade bonds. While price appreciation may be slow, until money rules higher, the long-term investor can now afford to make his commitments.

If the yield obtainable on common equities is accepted as a measure of the bear market movement, comparison with 1921 would tend to show it was pretty well exhausted at the lows of June 4. On that date 340 stocks yielded 9.71 per cent against a high yield of 9.93 in 1921.

* * *

Brokers who continue to take their market clues from the utilities were buyers on balance in yesterday's session when the group showed excellent strength. They say they will continue to form their near term market policy by the action of this group.

Canadian Loadings Decrease in Week

Receipts from connections in the week of May 30 amounted to 26,101 a decrease of 1485 from the similar 1930 week and 1789 from the preceding seven days.

Newton's Loan Is Awarded in Boston

Oil Output Shows 9576 Barrel Gain

NEW ENGLAND GAS EXPANDS BUILDING

New England Gas & Electric Association has not let up in its construction work. From organization in December, 1930, to the end of 1930 the construction program of the association resulted in additions to plant of roughly $12,000,000. Normal growth of the system is 10 per cent a year. The association is now working on a program involving over $800,000 on projects beyond normal development items.

Major projects now under way include doubling of production facilities at the Martha's Vineyard plant. The association is completing six miles of gas main to tie in the West Boston Company and Worcester Gas Light Company plants.

In the Maritime provinces, a new cable is being constructed across the St. Croix River from St. Andrews, N. B., to the Calais-St. Stephen plant, to enable the latter to serve St. Andrews. At Fredericton, N. B., the company has entered a 20-year contract under which it will purchase power from the New Brunswick Power Commission.

Throughout the association's territory, business has held up well. In Cambridge, business is somewhat ahead of last year, while in West Boston Co. territory it is well ahead. The association expects to add this year over 1000 heating contracts in the Massachusetts area as result of new promotional rates.

The association has called for redemption on July 1 the $3,817,000 of New Bedford Gas & Edison Light Co. mortgage 5s and also $762,000 of 5 per cent coupon notes of the same company, and on October 1 will retire $100,000 6 per cent mortgage bonds of Dedham & Hyde Park Gas & Electric Co. The New Bedford Co. has just marketed $4,500,000 of 3 per cent one-year notes to provide funds for retirement of the mortgage obligations. Thus after October the association will be free of mortgage debt on any of its operating properties.

CURB MARKET CLOSES OFF

New York, June 9—The Curb market turned reactionary in the final hour of a more or less erratic session today. With the exception of a handful of favorites in the oil and specialty groups, final prices were at moderately lower levels.

American Gas & Electric had a net loss of 1¼ points. Cities Service, which failed to participate in the early advance, was at the same time free of any undue pressure in the closing weakness, showing a gain of but ¼ at its last hour low.

Early advances of from 2 to 5 points in the oil group were virtually all eliminated by the finish, although the plus sign was still predominant in this list. Gulf, Humble, Standard of Ohio and Vacuum were the standard-bearers in the market's earlier upturn. Aluminum had a net loss of 2½ points.

Investment trusts held within generally narrow trading limits throughout the wide fluctuations undergone by the market as a whole.

Price of Platinum Has Sharp Advance

New York, June 9 (AP)—The price of platinum, which last month was at the lowest level since 1910, took a sharp advance when producers pushed it up from $25 to $37.50 an ounce.

The advance brought the price of the metal to almost twice its level of less than a month ago, when it sold as low as $21.50 an ounce. It was said in Wall Street to be in anticipation of producers agreeing to curtail production.

STOCKS REACT AFTER MAKING NEW ADVANCE

New York, June 9—The stock market in Wall St. had to contend with profit taking and short selling during the afternoon hours today, reversing its course of the morning when the recovery made substantial progress in most departments.

Net losses of 1 to 4 points cropped out in most of the active shares, which had been roughly that much above the previous close at the best prices of the day. Railroad and foreign bonds firmed. Trading in both markets was dull and sales of stock approximated 1,900,000 shares.

TELEPHONE LOWERED.

A cut in the Western Electric dividend had an unsettling effect shortly after noon and American Telephone broke sharply, closing 4 points lower. U. S. Steel was off 2¼ and American Can 3.

Consolidated Gas, General Electric, General Motors, Rock Island, National Biscuit, Radio, Union Pacific, Woolworth and Borden lost 1 and 2. Westinghouse, Case and Air reduction dropped 3.

Auburn tumbled 18, Western Union rallied nearl 2 on declaration of the regular dividend. Norfolk & Western rose 5 and Atchison 2 points.

Decision of the Southern railroads to fall into step with whatever rate action is decided upon by the eastern carriers was interpreted constructively. It indicates the petition to be placed before the Interstate Commerce Commission will have the general support of roads in all sections.

First estimate of steel ingot production for the past week, supplied by "American Metal Market," said there had been no measurable decrease, and that the decline from the spring peak had held to seasonal proportions.

STEEL'S REDUCTION

Steel shares were probably anticipating a sizeable reduction in U. S Steel's backlog, figures on which will be published at noon tomorrow The reduction, however, is reported as below the normal seasonal drop averaged over five years.

Closing of 12 more Chicago banks, announced shortly after noon, found the market reactionary and probably had somewhat more effect on speculative sentiment than did the banking developments in that city yesterday.

Reduction in the Western Electric dividend to a $3 annual basis from $4 affected American Telephone, which owns virtually all of the outstanding stock in this manufacturing subsidiary.

Western had to dig into surplus to meet dividends on the old basis last year and operations so far in 1931 have been well below capacity. Wall Street heard that this was the only unit of the Bell System which was making a markedly unfavorable showing.

News from the commodities embraced a rise in the price of platinum, accompanied by reports that producers planned a conference in London to discuss curtailment of output. There were no developments in the copper market.

Call loans on the New York Stock Exchange renewed at what has come to be regarded as the pegged rate, 1½ per cent.

Woolworth Stock Extra Expected

Success of the public offering of securities in F. W. Woolworth Co.'s British subsidiary augurs well for stockholders of the parent company. Offer is likely to realize in excess of 45,000,000 pounds, of which more than half will accrue to Woolworth. How this will be passed along to stockholders is likely to come before directors in the near future. Next dividend meeting is scheduled for early in July.

In some quarters it is believed the board will consider increasing the present $2.40 annual rate to $3, in addition to an extra cash distribution of possibly $1, as well as a stock dividend.

BROUILLARD AND PIRRONE CLASH IN GARDEN RING

FANNING

By GEORGE UNDERWOOD

Pirrone Can Punch. Primo vs. Big Pat.
They Meet Tonight. ↓ Better Buy Posies.

Cheese It! Here Comes an Earthquake!

Big Primo, the Eytalian, and Pat, the Irish mite—
If windows start to rattle, the earth shakes far and wide,

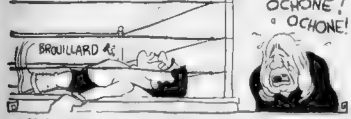
IS LOU Brouillard, welterweight champion of New England, really headed for even higher championship heights? Or is the boy from Worcester, with the blood of the old voyagers flowing in his veins, going to halt in the foothills? Those questions should be answered in the Boston Garden, tonight, for Larruping Lou meets Paul Pironne of Cleveland, a two fisted, sharp hitting fighting man who himself has designs on a world's title and who has a style and ability to make Brouillard uncork more fistic stuff than he yet has shown if he wants to retain his place in the fistic sun. The Cleveland scrapper was good enough to three times drop Young Corbett on the canvas and twice knock Jackie Fields off his feet. It is no palooka Brouillard is meeting tonight and if Lou doesn't keep his chin out of the way he is likely to wake up listening to the canaries chirping.

Whether Brouillard's southpaw style will puzzle the Cleveland boy with the knockdown punch remains to be seen. Corpulent Eddie Mead, his manager, claims that all scrappers look alike to Pironne.

"Paul is of the boring in two fisted type which is effective against all opposing styles," says the man who piloted Joe Lynch into the world's bantamweight throne. "Styles make no difference to a hitter like Pironne. He can knock a southpaw from under his hat just as quickly as he can a right hander. You've been saying lots of nice things about Brouillard. Pironne will make you take some of 'em back, tonight. Pironne either will knock Brouillard into your lap or else all the way back to Worcester."

But we'll stick to Brouillard until we see him on the canvas, toes up. We'll betcha your Paul will not knock M'seu Brouillard into our lap. (P. S.—We're getting almost as fat as you are Eddie and haven't any more lap than you have. The best we can do these days is to trot 'em on the ends of our knees. Ain't it 'ell to be fat?)



IF PIRONNE SHOULD DO IT!
OCHONE! OCHONE!
BROUILLARD

If the windows shake and the dishes rattle in the pantry 'long about 10 P. X., tomorrow night, don't think it is an earthquake. It'll only be one of those human pachyderms, Primo Carnera and Pat Redmond, laying down to pleasant dreams over there in the Brooklyn ball yard on the banks of the aromatic Gowanus. From all the signs along the trail it will be Redmond's Celtic phiz the ground will fly up and hit. The much ballyhooed Pat was whipped by a whole flock of ham and beaners in Australia, and the Italian Man Mountain is likely to erupt, topple over and squash the everlasting daylights out of poor Pat, tomorrow night.

It would be a grand and glorious feelin' to the citizens with the blood of Brian Boru flowing in their veins to have Pat triumph and a real Irish heavyweight enter the lists again. But according to the fistic dope Pat has about as much chance as a Son of St. George at a meeting of the Sinn Fein. That at least is the view point Jimmy Johnston, the New York promoter, must take of it. The Boy Bandit certainly wouldn't spoil his contemplated Sharkey-Carnera match by having the Italian Man Mountain dynamited and blown out of the fistic picture would he?

But what a gate, Horatio, would be attracted by a Sharkey-Redmond match, provided the Irish giant should knock Carnera right out of the fistic gondola, tomorrow night. Sicc 'em, Pat. Faugh-a ballagh Erin go bragh.

But while giving the Celtic war cry we are feeling down in our jeans to see if we have enough mazuma to buy shamrocks for poor Pat's fistic funeral. Hope Tom O'Rourke is good enough to provide an old-fashioned wake with a couple of cases of Guinness' Stout and all the fixin's.

Max Schmeling has one idea American fighters training for a world's championship could afford to adopt. That is to work with as many sparring partners of different styles and types as possible. When Schmeling was training at Endicott for his fight with Sharkey the German used 18 sparring partners during the grind. He only boxed with one or two of 'em more than once. Always he tried to have a new man in front of him with a new style to fathom. It was an ideal way to sharpen up his hitting, improve his boxing and make him ready for any style or tactics Sharkey might employ. We understand Schmeling is planning to have just as large a boxing stable to work with him for Stribling.

The American system of having three or four broken down sparring partners with whose styles a fighter thoroughly is familiar, work with a man throughout the entire training grind is all wrong. The Schmeling system of new, fresh sparring partners daily is the right one.

$40,000 GATE FOR PRIMO, PAT

New York, June 9 (US)—There will be in the neighborhood of $40,000 in the Treasury tomorrow evening when the subjects or objects of all this attention, Primo Carnera and Pat Redmond, do battle at Ebbets Field.

Up to today, fear that Madison Square Garden would seek an injunction against the bout held down the advance sale. There seems little likelihood of that now and the box office did a big business all day long. Carnera is expected to be 10 to 1 in the betting, if any.

Kirkwood Has a 74 in French Open Golf

Deauville, France, June 9 (AP)—Andre Boyer, Nice professional, and Rene Golias of the Four Queux Club, near Paris, led the early finishers in the French open golf championship today with 71's, a course record.

Marcel Cuomo and Tomaso Genta, Argentine golfers were tied for second at 73. Jose Jurado had a 76. R. A. Whitcombe had the best of the British scores, a 75.

Joe Kirkwood, the trick shot artist, had a 74, placing him well up in the list on his first round. Aubrey Boomer of the St. Louis Club had a 73, as did Marcel Dallemagne, another French professional.

'Title Bed' Now Used by Young Stribling

Geauga Lake, Ohio, June 9—The night Jack Dempsey knocked out Jess Willard, in Toledo—July 4, 1919—he slept in a big brass bed in the Hotel Secor.

When Young Stribling and Pa stopped in Toledo, the management of the hotel got out the same old brass bed, fitted it up in the Stribling suite, and the big southerner, who fights Max Schmeling for the world's title in Cleveland, July 3, slept in it.

Now the Secor managers are keeping the bed guarded, hoping soon to be able to show it as the bed on which two world's champions have slept. And Stribling promised them he will do all in his power to make their wish come true when he meets Schmeling next month.

Concord Town Team Plays Leominster

Concord, June 9—The Concord town baseball team will take on the Leominster club in a Middlesex County league game tonight, on the Emerson playground diamond, Concord Centre, at 6:15 o'clock.

Universal Service

Roslyn, N. Y., June 9—Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, who was British and American golf champion when Taft was President, said that the new balloon ball has taken all the joy out of the game for women. Commenting on her round of 86 in the Eastern championship, Mrs. Hurd said:

"Golf for us poor women now is just one wood shot after another.

"In one round I used my mid-iron only once, my mashie iron only once and not once did I take my mashie out of my bag.

"With the new ball, the courses are far too long for us. The most delightful part of golf is iron play and that enjoyment is now denied us."

MALCEWICZ IN BOSTON GYM

Joe Malcewicz, Utica Panther has opened training quarters at Toland's Gym where he is getting into condition for his finish bout, best two falls out of three, with Howard Cantonwine, Iowa Thunderbolt. The bout will take place at the Arena on Thursday night.

Malcewicz made the long trip from the Northwest to Boston by auto. Joe has been wrestling in the Northwest for the past year. He has made occasional trips to Los Angeles and San Francisco where he has wrecked all opposition.

Since invading the far West, Malcewicz has won 23 straight bouts. He decided to come East when he learned that Henri Deglane had won the world's heavyweight wrestling championship from Strangler Lewis at Montreal.

Joe had hoped to battle Lewis in Los Angeles, but when Deglane won the title he started shooting for the Frenchman. The Panther appeared to be in excellent physical condition following his first workout.

Al Morelli, who was originally booked to meet Bonnie Muir in the semifinal, won't be able to go through with the match as he had a previous booking at Waterville, Me. Al was confused with his dates, probably due to the fact he is in the midst of graduation exercises at Boston College.

Boris Demetroff, the Bulgarian will take the place of Morelli against Muir. Muir made a hit with the fans by the way in which he tossed Pat McKay.

John Pyles Green Lacrosse Captain

Hanover, N. H., June 9—John Pyles of Washington, D. C., has been elected captain of Dartmouth lacrosse team for next year.

Pyles is also a football letter man. He played a year as guard.

Lou Brouillard Battles Pirrone Tonight

By JACK CONWAY

Lou Brouillard of Worcester will make his first ring start, since he won the New England welterweight championship by knocking out Al Mello, when he trades blows with Paul Pirrone of Cleveland in a 10-round bout at the Boston Garden tonight.

Brouillard will enter the ring a favorite with the speculative element. It is expected that Lou's ruggedness and punching power will carry him to victory.

Jack Conway

The sturdy French-Canadian will not be opposed by a cream puff battler tonight. Pirrone hasn't any titles, but he comes to town with a reputation of having made things mighty interesting for some of the best men in the welterweight division.

Pirrone has a draw to his credit with Tommy Freeman, while he gave Gorilla Jones a hard fight, losing the decision at the end of 10 heats.

Pirrone is only 21 years of age and has a bright ring future. He is a stiff right hand puncher and he says he will tip Brouillard over if he is able to land with his right duke this p. m.

Cormier and Winneryck in the Semifinal

In addition to Brouillard, Vernon Cormier, another Worcester favorite, is also on tonight's card. He is listed to battle Stanley Winneryck of Lawrence in the eight-round semifinal. Cormier and Winneryck both like to let their punches breeze. This should mean action for the fans.

There will be three five-round matches. Tommy Rawson, Jr., of East Boston, will take on Leo Ledoux of Spencer; Tony Aquaro of Lynn will collide with Val Nadeau of Somersworth, N. H., while Victor Lotti of Marlboro will clash with Patsy Pacino of East Boston.

Linderman Sports Head at Winchester

Ronald W. Linderman, director of physical education at Aurora, N. Y., has been appointed faculty director at Winchester high, succeeding Coach Wendell W. Mansfield, who has been granted a year's leave of absence.

Linderman is a graduate of Springfield College and played on the football, basketball, soccer, swimming and tennis teams.

Junior Tennis Play at Winchester

The Palmer street court in Winchester will be the scene of a junior tennis tournament this week, a mixed doubles affair, with entries being received by William S. Packer of Winchester up to Friday night. Members of each team must be students at the same school.

Jack Conway Picks Brouillard to Win From Pirrone

Jack Conway today picked Lou Brouillard of Worcester to win from Paul Pirrone of Cleveland in their 10-round bout at the Boston Garden tonight.

"Brouillard is one of the most promising boxers to come to the front in New England in several years," said Jack. "He is aggressive and can punch. This combination should carry him a long way up the fistic trail.

"Pirrone isn't any push over. He has battled some of the best men in the welterweight division with credit to himself."

Conway's 1931 record follows:

SIX YEAR OLD SON OF MANAGER GIVES SOX LUCK

BOB COLLINS IS REAL HELP TO RED HOSE

By JOE CASHMAN

"You're a great manager and a great guy, pa, but you need somebody around with young ideas, if you want to get anywhere with your Red Sox. Take me, for instance. I could get that club of yours out of the cellar in jig time."

It was Master Bobby, six-year-old son of Manager John "Shono" Collins of the Red Sox, talking to his dad last Thursday evening, after three straight defeats suffered by the Fenway athletes had enveloped the new Collins' residence in Newton in deepest gloom.

"Didn't I pull the Pittsfield club out of a lot of slumps?" continued the young man. "You just bet I did. And I can do the same with the Sox. Try me and see."

"You're on, son," replied "Shono." "Come down to the park tomorrow and I'll give you a uniform."

So young Bobby, who had never seen a big league game, became a member of the Red Sox board of strategy on Friday and lost no time in putting his young ideas into effect.

"Say," he began while donning his 'uni,' "what's the matter this fellow Rothrock isn't in the line-up? He can hit that ball and we need hitting strength. Can't find any place for him? What's the matter with left field?

"Let's make these changes and get out of the cellar.

So to left went Rothrock, to first went Sweeney, the Sox won three in a row, and by Sunday night were in seventh place.

Defeat Fails to Discourage Bobby

Bobby couldn't young idea the Sox into a Monday win over the Browns and now the club is in the basement again, but that isn't worrying the kid a little bit.

"You can't win 'em all," he remarked today. "It will take a little while to get the Sox away up, but daddy, Rudy and I will do it before the next western trip."

"You just bet you will, kid," agreed the players.

Then the youngster sat back and talked about papa, 'Shono' and himself for a while.

"Dad," he began," is the greatest manager in the world. He never finished out of the first division and believe me he won't this year. I won't let him. If I did, I might lose my job. Gee, that would be awful.

"I play every day and am going to be a big league infielder and a big league manager like daddy, when I grow up."

"How many homers did you hit off me this morning?" broke in 'Shono'.

"Three, and Webby is going to hit that many in his next game. He told me so."

Youngster Source of Inspiration to Team

And there, in those last four words, is the reason for the Sox recent spurt. They feel this youngster is lucky, promise him to accomplished the almost impossible and then go out and do it.

Pa Collins has given way to son Collins as the boss and inspirer of the team.

"Shono," unlike most big leaguers who don't want their sons to be ball players, is encouraging the boy in his ambition to be a diamond star.

If he proves as successful as he has as an assistant manager, he should be one of the world's greatest.

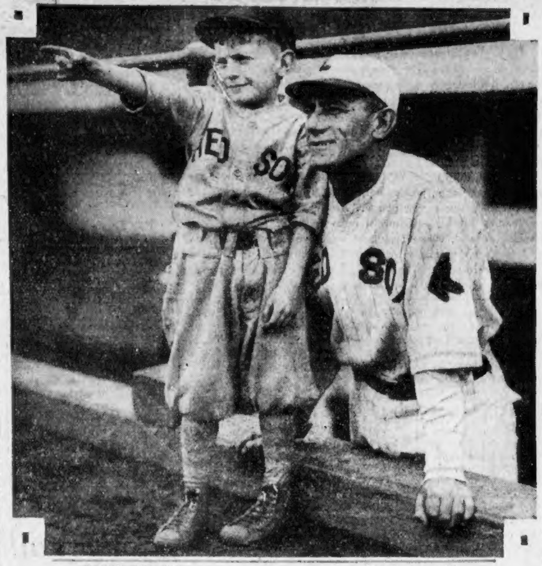
GETTING THE YOUNG IDEA ACROSS



BOBBY COLLINS SHONO COLLINS

Bobby Collins, six-year-old son of Manager Shono Collins of the Red Sox, is shown as he slips a few of his young ideas on the national game to his father. Bobby has inspired the team to win, in the past week. Bob is the players' good luck mascot.

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Immediately Joe Pezzullo drove a spoon shot from the 10th tee yesterday afternoon at Sandy Burr, his cousin Harry, who was caddying for him, said, "It's in the cup." And he called the turn.

Although young Pezzullo's outstanding feats were his hole-in-one and his 22 putts for 18 holes, his recovery after two bad shots at the 11th stamped him as the possessor of iron nerve. He topped his tee shot which rolled down the hill and then flushed his second, but he connected with a fine spoon shot, which rolled to within 10 yards of the green from where he chipped for a birdie.

Willie Ogg's failure to qualify was due to his inability to play the first hole. In the morning round Willie needed four to get down from the edge of the green after two beautiful shots and in the afternoon he came up with a seven at at the first hole. Even with his two bad opening holes, Ogg was just short of the 36th green in 145 shots but he messed up his next shot, his ball going about one yard and then after a fine chip he missed his putt and was 149 when he should have been 147, which would have shut out Henry Cuici.

Henry Cuici, Mill River, was not up to his usual form and but for deuces at the 28th and 31st holes he would not have made the grade.

Among the teams that will play in the N. E. P. G. O pro-pro fourball tournament at the Kernwood Country Club next Monday, will be Jack Shea and Jim Hendry, Tom Mahan and Frank Lally, Tom Dean and Tom Jones, Gene Anderson and Bud Clancy, Willie Ogg and Walter Cosgrove, Alex Ellis and Dave Hackney, and Dick May and George Gordon.

Tommy Welsh, Scarboro, and Charlie Crowley staged a half-hour putting contest at Sandy Burr yesterday afternoon in the rain. Although Welsh has played only 27 holes of golf this season, he is still a master putter.

Dan O'Connell, Merrimack Valley, surprised the boys by shooting the 38—36—74 in the morning round yesterday at Sandy Burr.

Of the 153 strokes that John Bernardi, Charles River, played during the last 36 holes of the State open championship at Worcester last week, 65 of them were putts. John had no less than 16 three-putt greens during his final rounds at Worcester.

MISS ORCUTT BEATS MRS. SOULBY

Portmarnock, Ireland, June 9 (INS)—Miss Maureen Orcutt, only American competitor in the British ladies' golf championship, defeated Mrs. D. E. Soulby of England five up and four to play in the first round of match play today.

Although she won by a big margin, Miss Orcutt did not have a good round. She took 43 strokes to reach the turn, having three 6s and a 5 on her card. Mrs. Soulby reached the turn in 46. The American girl had two up on the British woman at the turn.

Going in Miss Orcutt struck her pace and reeled off a trio of 4s, a 5 and another 4, while Mrs. Soulby went completely to pieces. The cards:

Orcutt, out ...6 4 4 5 6 6 4 4 4—43
Soulby, out....5 6 5 7 4 6 4 4 3—46
Orcutt, in.....4 4 4 5 4—21
Soulby, in.....5 4 4 8 5—26

The first round was concluded without upsets. The three favored British players—Diana Fishwick, the defending cup champion; Enid Wilson, English champion, and Molly Gourlay—advancing to the second round with Miss Orcutt.

Diamond Dust

By JOE CASHMAN

The St. Louis Browns would like to grab off one of the Red Sox pitchers before the ban falls on trading next Monday, but their chances are slim unless they stop trying to get two dimes for a nickel.

They would take Russell, MacFayden, Gaston or, possibly, Morris for Lin Storti, rookie second sacker. There's generosity for you. A first-year bench warmer for a veteran high-class pitcher.

If Manager Bill Killefer would consider trading Oscar Melillo or Red Kress the Sox might possibly listen, but the enemy pilot won't, so the possibilities of a deal are slim.

Killefer tried to tell "Shono" Collins that Storti is the best of his infielders. "Then, why don't you play him instead of keeping him on the bench?" asked the Sox pilot. Bill had no answer to that one because there isn't any.

Milt Gaston's arm isn't just right yet. He tried it out yesterday and got by for three innings, but he weakened in the next three and was found for four runs before Morris came to his rescue.

Harold "Rabbit" Warstler will probably start at second base for the Sox in the fourth and final game of the series with the Browns this afternoon.

The Braves, after a day off, will resume hostilities with the Reds at Cincinnati this p. m. Tomorrow they will move to St. Louis for four games with the champion Cardinals, whom they haven't played yet this season. The Streetmen paid a visit to Boston last month but rain washed them out of the entire series here.

BROOKLINE RACE MEET NEXT WEEK

By GEORGE W. GRIMM

Augustus Goodwin, Bayard Tuckerman and John R. Macomber of the Eastern Horse Club played hosts at a luncheon at the Union Club to the scribes and friends of horse racing.

Elaborate plans were made for the coming race meet of the Eastern Horse Club at The Country Club, Brookline, on June 17 and 20, also on Monday, June 22, at Raceland, the estate of John R. Macomber.

The latter meet is a free party which Macomber tosses annually for the lovers of horse flesh.

Everyone buying admission for the Clyde Park races will for the first time in the history of racing at the Brookline track be able to see all the jumps and races.

This meet is the biggest hunt meet in America. It is put on at an expense of $55,000. Stakes and purses run to $23,000. Some of the best of horse flesh will be on hand for the meet.

The world's best gentleman rider, Pete Bostwick will be on hand to ride in this meet, while his brother, Alfred Bostwick, will have entries in the meeting.

The committee of the Eastern Horse Club have remodeled the course for the steeplechase events, which always added spice to the meeting. All jumps in the steeplechasing will be in view of the spectators.

Standing or sitting at any point of the track, one will be able to witness the different events and see all six jumps.

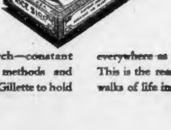
THE VAST MAJORITY DEMANDS GILLETTE

IN TULSA OR TOKIO
It's Gillette!



"EAST is east and West is west"—but men of all races think alike when they need razor blades. Gillette is overwhelmingly first choice in Tulsa or Tokio—in almost every city and town here and abroad. Constant engineering research—constant refinement of manufacturing methods and finished product—have enabled Gillette to hold its position of undisputed leadership for more than 29 years. Finely tempered steel—double-edged for double service—glides over your skin without harshness or irritation when you shave with this blade, accepted everywhere as the highest standard of value. This is the reason the majority of men in all walks of life insist on Gillette the world over.

PEZZULLO IS GOLF STAR

GREAT FUTURE AHEAD FOR YOUNGSTER

By BILL GRIMES

Back in 1920, John Cowan, now professional at the Oakley Country Club, played with Gene Sarazen at Inverness in the United States open championship, and upon his return home he predicted that the swarthy little Italian from Rye, N. Y., would within three years win the crown which Ted Ray took back to England with him that season.

Two years later Gene Sarazen lived up to Cowan's predictions at Skokie.

After watching Joe Pezzullo in the first New England Interscholastic championship at Oakley two years ago, Cowan was so well impressed with the little Rhode Island Italian that he referred to him as a second Sarazen and predicted a brilliant future for Pezzullo. Although Joe Pezzullo, who is only 20 years old, has held the caddy, junior and amateur championships of Rhode Island, his greatest achievement came when he led the field in the New England District qualifying rounds for the U. S. Open championship with a 146.

There were 37 players at Sandy Burr, battling for the three places alloted to New England. Henry Cuici, Mill River C. C., Conn. and Dave Hackney, Vesper, were favored to win two of the three places, but no one predicted that Joe Pezzullo would qualify, giving Bob Crowley, Willie Ogg and Jack Curley the preference over the rest of the field for the odd berth.

Hackney and Cuici ran true to form and qualified, but the other favorites were eliminated by Joe Pezzullo, who, after shooting a 76 in the morning round came through with a 70 to lead the field with a 146. Pezzullo's lead was the result of a hole in one at the tenth in the afternoon round, when he smashed a spoon shot into the cup.

Pezzullo Takes 22 Putts for 18 Holes

Joe Pezzullo, who is now representing the Wanumetonomy Golf and Country club, Middletown, R. I. started in golf as a caddy at the Rhode Island Country club. In 1926 he won the caddy championship of Little Rhody and the following year, he was runner up in the Junior championship and the next season he captured that title by defeating Tommy Tailer.

In 1929, Pezzullo won the amateur championship of Rhode Island but last year the medalist jinx proved too much of a burden for him and he was eliminated in the semifinals by Teddy Hancock, a former title holder, in a 20-hole match.

Few golfers have ever encountered more barriers while fighting for recognition than Joe Pezzullo. His success in the caddy championship was well received throughout the State of Rhode Island but many did not look with favor upon his victory over Tommy Tailer in the juniors three years ago.

This prejudiced group, however, did not include Tommy Tailer, who has the greatest respect and admiration for Pezzullo, both as a golfer and a good fellow. The real "knifing" of Pezzullo started when Joe went through and won the amateur title, for a certain element could not cotton to the idea of an Italian caddy winning the highest honors in golf in their state.

Unsportsmanlike Foes Ignored by Pezzullo

During many of Pezzullo's important matches he has been given the "business" by opponents, but to his great credit he has overlooked every unsportsmanlike remark and act, despite the fact that time and again they cut him to the quick.

Joe Pezzullo was somewhat temperamental a few years ago, but he is gradually getting control over his fiery Latin disposition. He has an abundance of nerve and it is quite improbable that at Inverness he will be affected to any great extent by the fact that he is playing in his first national open championship.

Of course, he will be subjected to the usual attack of stage fright, which hits every contestant in such an important classic before the start of his first round. But once he regains his poise he will start hitting his shots with as much confidence as any player in the field.

Due to the fact that he never loses his confidence to such an extent as to "choke" and never freezes on a shot, if Pezzullo is at the top of his game at Inverness he will surprise those critics to whom he is now a mere unknown.

Nick Lutze Throws Stasiak Twice

Montreal, Que., June 9 (AP)—Nick Lutze, California, 208, defeated Stanley Stasiak, Poland, 204, in two falls out of three of a wrestling match tonight. Stasiak won the first fall in 26:00, but Lutze captured the next two in 11:00 and 10:00.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

As I have mentioned, all your golfing faults will drop into one or the other of the four golfing fundamental slots which have now been defined. Slicing indicates your swing is out of parallel, club being diagonally across direction line at top. Hooking indicates club is short of parallel at top. Topping indicates lack of fixed swing center—meaning your head lifts, probably because you apply too much force in forward swing. If your shots fail to get up the indication again is that you are letting your head move and, with it, you whole body lunges forward. If the ball skies, your swing radius calls for attention, the fault being a swing too cramped, too closely restricted, left elbow breaking or left arm collapsing.

ARGONNE FIGHT SHOW FRIDAY

Sergt. Eddie Mack of the Argonne A. A. could make his squad in France obey orders, but he cannot get to first base with the weather man. Showers made it necessary for Mack to postpone his boxing show, billed for Braves Field last night, until Friday evening.

Mack didn't want to conflict with the Garden show tonight or with Paul Bowser's wrestling program on Thursday night.

The fighters were all back in the gym today. Paul Swiderski and Babe Hunt, who meet in the feature bout, will save their kayo punches until Friday night. So will George Nichols and Rosy Rosales, who collide in another ten.

Leslie Baker and Werter Arcelli didn't like to wait, but they finally agreed they would have to bow to the wishes of the weather man.

Ex-Harvard, Yale Crewmen to Race

Harvard and Yale crew fans at New London, one day before the Harvard-Yale boat race, June 19, will see a spectacle of two boatloads of "gentlemen" oarsmen garbed in tall hats, cutaway coats, canes, etc., racing.

The boats will contain former Harvard and Yale oarsmen.

AMATEURS IN MINORITY IN U. S. OPEN

New York, June 9 (AP)—The national open golf championship, starting at the Inverness Club, Toledo, O., July 2, will be even more top-heavy with professionals than it has been in past years.

Of the 150 players who have been selected to start, only 11 will be amateurs, and none of these a Bobby Jones. As it looks now, the principal hopes among the simon-pures will be George Voigt and T. Philip Perkins of New York, the latter a former British amateur champion.

The other amateurs who have gained a place in the field include George Dawson and Johnny Lehman of Chicago, Lester Bolstad of St. Paul, Tom Cooley of Tucson, Ariz Joe Pezzullo of Wanumetonomy, R. I.; Chester O'Brien and Bryan Winter of St. Louis, Sam Parks, Jr., of Pittsburgh, and Johnny Fischer of Cincinnati.

The exempt list included all those who finished in the first 30 and ties at Interlachen last year and a host of foreign players, including the ten members of the British Ryder Cup team.

Two veterans, Al Espinosa of Chicago, with 135, and Wiffy Cox of Brooklyn, with 138, carried off individual honors for low scores in yesterday's qualifying round.

Two former open champions, Willie MacFarlane and Cyril Walker, failed to qualify at Westchester, and so did the veteran, Mike Brady, runner-up for the title in 1911 and 1919.

Londos, Roebuck to Wrestle on Monday

Jim Londos, Greek heavyweight, has been signed to meet Tiny Roebuck, Indian grappler, in a one-fall match to a finish at the Boston Garden on next Monday night.

This match has been hanging fire since Roebuck scored a win over Dick Daviscourt at the Arena. The Indian had previously won from Hans Steinke in a rough and tumble match at the Garden.

Londos has not been defeated in any of his Boston appearances this season.

RUM BOAT BROADCAST

Voices From Runner Expected Tonight

Listeners Anticipate Sensational Effort Made at Sea

Up to the present writing, radio broadcasting may well be considered as among the safer occupations of man. With the exception of a few instances, when announcers have gone aloft in planes, there has been little to consider hazardous about putting on programs. But now comes an undertaking that may endanger life and limb. Yep, the time has come at last to use the word intrepid as a fitting adjective with which to describe air narrators, on risky exploits bent.

Tonight, Ford Frick, public events reporter of the air (a former newspaper man, praises be), embarks on the briny deep to track down a rum-runner at sea. Accompanying Mr. Frick will be Thomas Brooks, adventurous radio editor of the New York Evening Journal, whose busy brain conceived the idea. WABC at New York, key station of the CBS network, will attempt the transmission somewhere between 9:30 and 10 o'clock, so be at the listening post. WNAC offers it locally.

Forty miles out from New York, aboard a seaworthy tug completely equipped, these radio trail blazers will endeavor to make contact with a runner and throw a line aboard. They will strive to scramble on the booze packet themselves, if possible, requesting a few well-chosen words from the skipper. As Tony Wons would put it, "Are You Listenin'?" Or is that a foolish question?

Facts Wanted Ashore! . . . .

There are some facts the captain could air at that. If the rum-selling gentleman states whether his stuff is made in New York, Boston, Canada or Scotland, the bit will have at least a measure of educational value. Wonder if he'll quote prices.

Doff all bonnets in the direction of John B. Kennedy, magazine editor and wizard of satire. A graceful adieu on Sunday evening (WBZ) warrants the installation of an additional feather in his Panama chapeau. Signing off for the summer (to return September 13), he certainly did so in a manner worthy of praise.

Fanfare and flag waving marked the opening of the annual Radio Trade Show at Chicago yesterday. As the sun reached the middle of heaven, whistles blew and motors roared during a ceremonious procession moving down Michigan boulevard. It stopped the doors of that great Coliseum in the mid-western metropolis. "Hail Radio! Hail Radio!" shouted the set makers, back came the echo from humanity's surging mass—"Hail Radio!" Chicago is thronged to witness a demonstration of what has been done and what is to be done, in America's infant industry.

Ukuleles and Harps . . . .

Harp music is beautiful on the air, no question about it—even experts don't hesitate to admit the fact (proof enough). Yet a ukulele is easier to pick up and strum at will, in addition to being less costly. Thus the latter's popularity is explained. Isn't it the truth?

Sir Hubert Wilkins and his Antarctic submarine expedition, now far into the North Atlantic, have complete radio equipment with which to transmit messages back to U. S. armchairs. Word is coming through from them shortly, when air channels will be cleared to hear how it feels down there under the ice floes.

Intentionally, consciously or otherwise, Kaltenborn sounds a lot like a certain "Brother Crawford."

On the Air

Last week NBC declared that network programs during the summer would remain intact, for the most part. Yet since the declaration much slashing and adding has occurred, and more is to come. The Boston Symphony Pop concerts started on WBZ Saturday; a series by the Goldman band will start June 10, and last night Harry Kogen and orch. started a WEEI series.

The slashing seems to be as vigorous as the adding. The Deems Taylor music appreciation series and the Collier hour ended Sunday. THE Quakers, WBZ Fridays, have cut their series of talks by noted authors. (The musical p'gram continues.)

In a few weeks Ted Lewis will be an ex-radio artist. He will be usurped on his Saturday WEEI feature by Charles King, movie and stage singer, who will warble and introduce a star each week. So all in all NBC must have been fooling.

Not since the air maneuvers have NBC and CBS broadcast the same event. Tomorrow at 3 the rival loops will have mikes in Brooklyn when the Dover Patrol Monument, erected in commemoration of the co-operation between England and the United States navies during the World War, is unveiled. Speakers will be British Ambassador Lindsay, Secretary of the Navy Adams and Mayor Walker of New York. WAAB and perhaps WBZ will carry.

Sir John Reith, British Broadcasting Corp. mogul, will speak on the general topic of "Radio," and a medal will be given him in recognition of his contribution to the advancement of radio, in a broadcast over WAAB at 8:15 tonight. H. A. Bellows, western vice-president of the CBS, will make the presentation . . . Paul Whiteman goes collegiate on WBZ at 8 this eve., even to the extent of offering the "Stein Song." . . . Playing a leading role in the sketch playlet, WEEI at 7:30 tonight, will be Bradley Barker in the role of a mule—a new radio voice.—M. G. M.

Personalities

MORTON DOWNEY had a little spare time one day last week and composed "My Melody of Love." No ghost writer, really . . . CRANE CALDER, CBS artist, used to sing with FRED RICH and orch. for not much money—but now . . . JACQUES RENARD pays regular union wages to a musician in his orch whose only duty is to sound the chimes at the start and close of each nightly quarter hour . . . RAY PERKINS, NBC "Old Topper," is a captain in the Army Reserve Corps . . . Mme. ERNESTINE SCHUMANN-HEINK is almost wholly responsible for the success of MARY McCOY, LEO O'ROURKE and MARY HOPPLE . . . Already there is talk of an extension of the Sat. eve Pop b'dcasts . . . FRANK LUTHER has left the Express p'gram . . . They are rumoring about changes in the SHERLOCK HOLMES p'gram . . ADRIAN O'BRIEN, the WNAC staff warbler, may sing nightly for a local radio advertiser . . . ANN LEAF, CBS organist, gets thousands of fan letters but the one that fills her full of pride is a laudatory note from a staff organist of another network

"Are you catechizing me?"

"Father, you are not in any possible money difficul——"

"No, I am not."

"If I thought it were that, then of course I would understand—"

"You would be a misled young woman."

"Then why?" she cried, and stamped her foot, a quick sheet of tears forming in her eyes. "Why?"

Jennifer in Revolt

"So far as you are concerned, Cataract Lodge is still yours to do everything you want with except give it away. I like your impulse, daughter, but it is out of the question."

"But why?" she cried, rising and stamping the desk three times with her gloved hand. "Why? Why? Don't treat me like a half-wit, Father. Why did you sell Cataract Lodge?"

"For the same reason that I have sold Thousand Island Camp and Beaupre and the Nice property."

"Father!"

"For reasons of greatest importance to me, but with the leaseholds which I have retained in each case, of no great importance to you or your Mother, since you are left free as ever to use them as you have heretofore."

"I think it is abominable," she said, frankly crying now. "Mother and I have every right to feel rottenly treated. Of course, it is all yours to do with as you will, but it might have been decenter, Father; it might have been kinder, it might have been treating us more like human beings and less like chattels, to have told us."

"I meant in good time to tell your Mother. This illness changed that."

"Mother isn't as ill as all that . . ."

"Never forget this, Jennifer. I have deeply-founded reasons for every move I make. You have never taken the time to be logical . . ."

"I—I simply don't know what to say to you, Father. You have me flabbergasted, as usual. I came here full of a desire to do something that had a wallop in it for someone besides myself. I came here because, God knows why, I still harbored the shred of a delusion that there was some way to get through to you. Somehow, this seemed to me the kind of thing, if I put it up to you—even if the idea did come from me—might help not only others, but—but us. I came here with the desire to give a leg to the kind of people who are going to do in life what I haven't got the guts or the brains or the character to do. But I don't want Cataract Lodge now. Even if it were yours to give—the desire has died.

"What I came most of all wanting out of you, I should have known I wasn't going to get!" cried Jennifer. "I should have known!" and stalked out of the office, with the bright tears standing in her eyes, and leaving him seated there, smeared with pain and pallor, the look of hunchback out in his face.

Jenny's secret apprehensions grew. She was afraid for her flesh. Rapiers of hot steel were beginning by now to jump through the pain in her side. She did not betray by word the rising tide of fear, but as her mind began to take on the cruel habit of visualizing that moment when the ether-cone would descend and consciousness plop over into lethal torpor, the skin began to stretch across her face like hauled tarpaulin.

A Bitter Thrust

And yet, to Jennifer, even though her father had said to her once in a voice that had for the moment given her pause, "Your mother may be a sicker woman than we realize," there was something of a game in this going of Jenny to the hospital again.

Jenny had seen to it that it was like that.

By hook and crook, mostly crook, her daughter laughingly assured her, Jenny had managed to prevail upon Dr. Noon to stretch hospital routine sufficiently to obtain for her a three-room suite, which was accomplished by the simple device of opening doors between the ordinary type of room.

There hung over the Rarick household the air of some one about to be married or about to set out on a voyage of exploration. Boxes and packages began to arrive at the house three days before Jenny left it.

"Jennifer, if anything unforeseen should happen . . ."

"Mother, I can't bear it! Why are you talking like that? You mustn't frighten me, darling. It's disgusting."

"Jennifer-idiot, stop being a cry-baby all over my new waterwave. I haven't the slightest intention of terminating my earthly engagement at this time. I am speaking of the unforeseen. . ."

STOMACH TROUBLE

Mrs. Mary Reardon, 650 E. 4th St., So. Boston, says: "I am 72 years old. For the past three years I suffered very much from stomach trouble. I was compelled to spend a great part of my time in bed, with pains around my heart and shoulder blades. A local doctor failed to relieve me. A neighbor Wm. Walsh, told me how Dr. Walsh had helped him when he suffered much as I did. I had Dr. Walsh treat me and soon was a great booster for Dr. Walsh. I told all my friends how much Dr. Walsh had helped me. I took my daughter to Dr. Walsh, and she, too, sings Dr. Walsh's praises. I permit the publication of this testimonial gladly, in the hope of helping others who suffer as I did."

WANTED: A PROSPERITY LOAN!

The proposal by William Randolph Hearst for a $5,000,000,000 peace time PROSPERITY LOAN tests the character and resourcefulness of the American people.

It emphatically raises the question whether this nation is capable of idealistic co-operation only for purposes of war and destruction.

In the last war, the United States raised $20,000,000,000 through Liberty loan and Victory loan campaigns.

These funds were employed largely to finance mutilation—to accomplish the pitiless destruction of life and limb.

William James, who was one of America's greatest philosophers, if not the greatest, astutely pointed out that agitation against war would be futile and academic until the people found a moral equivalent for war.

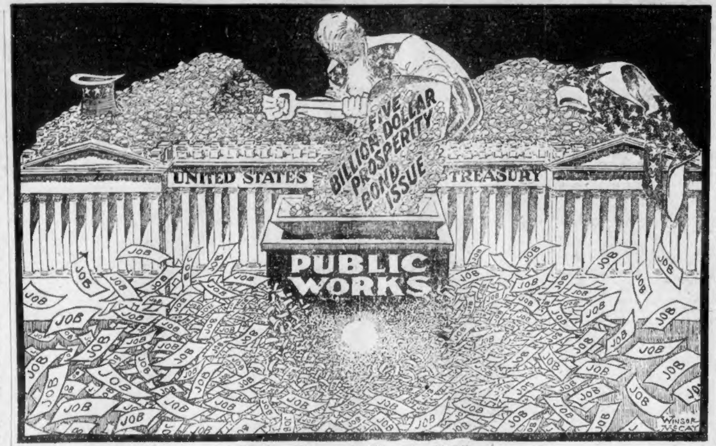
In his radio address last week, Mr. Hearst stirred the imagination of the American people by proposing a MORAL EQUIVALENT FOR WAR IN A GREAT PROGRAM OF SOCIAL RECONSTRUCTION LOOKING FORWARD TO THE RESTORATION OF PROSPERITY.

Instead of continuing a policy of drifting which condemns more than 5,000,000 unemployed to continued suffering and malnutrition, the publisher urges that the unprecedentedly vast capital resources of this country be tapped for socially desirable and humane uses.



"Why Doesn't He Do It?"

The funds which would be raised through the sale of long term United States government bonds would finance ESSENTIAL AND ECONOMIC FEDERAL PUBLIC works, including projects for internal waterways and power developments.

To do these urgently desirable things now when labor is in surplus supply would be doubly useful, for it would restore the buying power of the consumer public and thus in time generate the forces of a new and saner prosperity.

The oversubscription seven and a half times of the government $800,000,000 18-year 3⅛ per cent bonds shows that investable funds are available at call.

It is futile to speak of the responsibility of private initiative at a time when investors will buy in large quantities only gilt edged bonds, such as United States government obligations, but will not take sufficient quantities of second grade issues, such as private corporations issue.

Unquestionably, the federal treasury enjoys the highest credit in the world today.

The issue is whether this credit is to remain merely a source of senseless gloating, or whether it is to be turned to the SERVICE of the American people at this time of economic emergency.

It would be far more glorious to spend one-fourth of the sum raised by bond issues during the great war for the magnificent purposes of peace and social advancement.

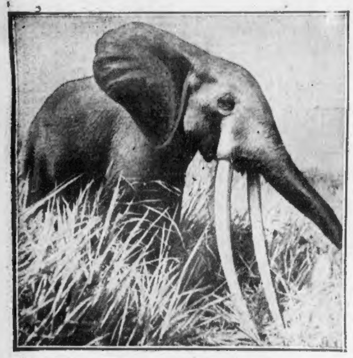
Moreover, from a purely business standpoint, the proposed $5,000,000,000 spent on public improvements under a carefully planned program would be returned many times to the American people in USEFUL SERVICES AND TRADE PROMOTION, whereas the expenditures for war are frittered away forever.

THE CHOSEN LEADERS AT WASHINGTON HAVE VACILLATED WHEN DECISIVE ACTION WAS NEEDED.

The time has come for the American people to notify their political servants what they want.

Marvelous Nature

She Regulates Even the Elephants' Teeth



HIS TUSKS GROW STRAIGHT, FOR A GOOD REASON

Seing this big elephant you ask: "What makes his tusks so straight?" You are familiar with the ancient mammoth of prehistoric days, his gigantic tusks curling upward and outward. You know the circus elephant, whose tusks come up over his trunk. This elephant, with tusks going straight down, like the digging end of a steam shovel, seems strange and unusual.

The picture, and the strange, straight tusks, prove once more nature's adaptability and wisdom.

This is an African bull elephant, inhabitant of the Congo Forest. If his tusks were spread out sideways, they would catch in the trunks and branches of trees and check his progress. Nature makes them grow straight down, close together.

With these tusks, spreading no wider than the monster's big head and wide shoulders, he can walk through the trees comfortably.

That is easily said, but how do you suppose the thing happens?

The elephant certainly cannot control the growth of his big ivory tusks. How does nature manage it? Science answers, "evolution" and adds "adaptation to environment."

The elephant lives in a tropical country, under sunshine, with an intense power that we, in the North, can scarcely imagine.

The powerful penetrating actinic rays of that sunshine will go through almost anything, even the dark thick hide of a forest elephant.

And, mysteriously, an elephant knows that at mid-day when the heat is too great, it is possible to mitigate the sun's cruel bombardment, by piling leaves and branches on his back, to temper the sun's fierce heat. Similarly the Englishman that hunts the elephant, put on his head a "Helmet" of cork and light material, white on the outside to keep off the heat rays, black or dark green on the inside to keep out the actinic rays.

How could Nature even by evolution or "adaptation to environment" provide the big elephant with tusks close together for convenience in walking through the forest?

Nature and all the mysteries of creation are too much for us, and we might as well admit it.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Two Answers

WHEN THEY told Mrs. Leslie Carter that David Belasco was dead she wept bitterly. And, in her new loneliness, she remembered words he had once said:

Elsie Robinson

"THE SOUL IS A VERY LONELY THING. LONELY IT COMES HERE AND LONELY IT GOES THERE. A QUIET NIGHT AMONG THE TREES—A GLIMMER IN THE MIST THAT SOON GOES OUT UPON ITS JOURNEY—AND WHERE?"

The soul goes—where? We do not know. And many, facing that fact, will despair and say:

"He was right. I have friends, a good job, many interests, but in spite of all that my soul is lonely—incurably lonely. I cannot even feel the love of man—not in the very depths of my soul. Love is only a romantic word and life is a tragic trick. I do not know why I am here. I do not know where I am going. My existence is a mystery and everything ends in a blank. There is no use trying to do anything, there is no use believing in anything, with only the grave ahead."

Some, despairing, will say that. But others will answer:

"He spoke the truth—the soul is lonely. It is with us as the old verse says:

"'Men are spirits clad in veils,
All our striving somehow fails
To lift that which lies between.'

"If my soul has the courage to stand its own loneliness—if it will not fool and hurt itself by expecting other people to solve its problems—then life can be a great adventure.

"It is true that life is a mystery. We cannot hope to understand it. But it is a great and noble mystery and we can wonder and admire even if we cannot understand. And no matter how long it lasts . . . even if it does not last beyond the grave . . . life is worth while.

"Just to have loved a few people . . . to have done a little good work . . . to have seen and felt the beauty of the earth . . . to have had a few splendid dreams . . . to have risked a few brave experiments . . . to have played with babies . . . to have known the loyalty of a friendly dog . . . to have seen Honor and Courage and Generosity standing like tall, white mountains above the sordid struggle—just that is enough to make life worth while.

"But it costs? Yes, it costs. If we are intelligent enough to think, sensitive enough to feel, then we are bound to think and feel pain as well as pleasure. But what of it? Pain is a small price to pay for the great privilege of thought and feeling. Love is worth anything it costs, even though it brings anguish. And so are all the other great experiences of life.

"David Belasco knew that. That is why he accepted all the challenges in life. That is why he stayed so tremendously alive, until the very end. AND WHY SHOULD WE SAY THAT HE HAS COME TO THE END? IF HIS SOUL COULD SURVIVE THE LONELINESS OF LIFE, CAN IT NOT SURVIVE THE SOLITUDE OF DEATH? MUST WE SAY THERE IS NO OTHER LIFE, SIMPLY BECAUSE WE CANNOT UNDERSTAND THIS ONE?"

There are two answers to the same question. No one can say which answer is right. No one can say what the soul IS . . . no one can say what it ISN'T. No one can say that the soul goes on . . . no one can say that it DOESN'T. There is just as much evidence to prove that life is worth while and that life persists as to prove that it isn't and doesn't. It is all a mystery. But you can do this—

YOU CAN CHOOSE YOUR OWN ANSWER.

You can choose to despair—or to hope.

And it seems to me that the man who hopes has all the best of the bargain. For even if he can't understand life, he has opened his heart to its beauty . . . he has gotten all the good out of it. And if the grave is the end, he has, at least, for his short span, lived as an immortal.

New York Day by Day

Folks Stay at Home

NEW YORK, June 9—New York is not experiencing the usual summer desolation. Those who, as a rule, are at this time enjoying the breeze swept verandahs of their country places are remaining in town. And seasonal European voyagers are not voyaging. Liners shove off one-third filled.

It is, of course, part of the economic adjustment and everybody is hopeful of returning to their routine by next summer. The biggest blow has fallen on tradesmen in smaller villages and the various gasoline filling stations. Road houses are empty.

One thing is fairly certain. Rents for summer homes will be lower next year. They were mounting so rapidly that only the elect could become tenants. A dinky house on the edge of a swamp with leaky garage and seedy back street decadence cost a fortune for the season.

Yet Long Island real estate will suffer no permanent slump, experts say. It is the logical area for a great city's natural expansion. It affords a wealth of scenery and even a primitive wildness. There are still deer running at large on Long Island.

Once the section was overrun with Indians. The last big chief went to his happy hunting ground at Montauk Point 60 years ago. But there remain a few Indians. Most of them, however, are half caste, interbred with Negroes. From the past comes a thick stubble of unpronounceable names.

Such as Mineola, Massapequa, Montauk, Quogue, Shagwong, Shinnecock, Canoe Place, Seawanaka, Seyauket, Amagansett, Patchogue, Cutchogue, Peconoic and Ronkonkoma. Long Island residential sections are known mainly as North Shore and South Shore—with North as the swankiest.

Between the two shores is the Great Bay—the "great" is rather comic—a shallow expanse of marshland, squirming with jellyfish. In the fall it attracts duck shooters. It is predicted that in 50 years Long Island will be as densely populated as Manhattan.

In a scene between Al Jolson and a titled Englishman, Jolson addresses him as Your Grace. But when the titled gentleman pulls a handkerchief from his cuff, Jolson inquires: "May I call you just Grace?

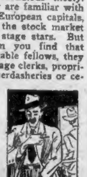
Since coming to New York I have been overwhelmed by an O. Henry obsession to find a "man-about-town." So far he has been a figment of fiction. It is possible he existed in early Roman days, a care free dilettante who plunged daily at the Roman thermae, wagered on gladiators and gazed at life through the red of a wine glass. But he has no prototype today. At prize fights, races and sundry sporting events there are men who from all appearances seem the real thing. They know everybody, squire a new damozel almost every evening, are well barbered and clothed with a fastidious nicety. You imagine they are familiar with wine, cards, the European capitals, the intricacies of the stock market and the reigning stage stars. But upon investigation you find that while they are likable fellows, they are usually brokerage clerks, proprietors of small haberdasheries or cement salesmen. Men who are at their posts of duty all day long and firm disciples of the philosophy of Elbert Hubbard.



So far the gentleman who comes nearest to fitting my notion of a man-about-town is the portrait painter, Ben Ali Haggin. And a runner-up is Jules Gleanzer.

This column needs something bright about here to perk it up. It's flopping all over the place! And about the only thing I can think of even mildly amusing is the crack of Joe Laurie, Jr., that things are so tough at his house the mice are giving themselves up to the cat.

Just Folks

Free Days

Here and there along the years
A day for comradeship appears;
A day apart from humdrum care
And all the burdens mortals bear,
When man may walk with whom he choose
And turn away from local news
To talk to nature's towering trees

A passing bird may catch his eye
And he may stand to watch it fly,
Or, lured by daisies, follow far
Where crowds of brown-eyed Susans are;
Later to find a running stream—
With rays of golden light agleam,
Nor ever stop to count the cost
Of precious moments wholly lost.

Men busy at their work forget
The beauty of the violet,
The majesty of trees; the charm
Of cattle browsing on a farm.
And likewise fail to keep in mind
The glory of their fellow-kind,
Because the soul is little known
Where barter rules the world alone.

But comes the day occasional, when
A man may be himself again,
And walk and talk and play with friends,
From dawn until the sunset ends.
Then beauty is his only goal,
Sky, earth and stream delight his soul.
And, drawn from petty cares afar,
He learns how fine life's splendors are.

4-Car Highways Our Need; About Trucks

By John T. Lambert

MRS. FRANK FORD HILL of Milton writes the following letter:

"Your article on wider roads in the June 4 issue was most timely.

"Speaking as a driver of my own car, I often wonder whether those in charge of road-building are just plain stupid or just plain grafters.

"Narrow roads are the cause of many accidents, as well as discomfort. It is impossible to see when safely to pass the trucks which are the width and length in size of a small house. And you will notice they always run in the middle of the road, paying no attention to the helpless tourist just behind.

"I might mention the wide buses that crowd us to the soft shoulder of the narrow road.

"I would suggest helping the unemployed by building roads three or four cars wide as they have in Detroit and other cities, putting freight on the freightcars and incidentally saving lives."

It is true, as Mrs. Hill suggests, that either modern highways of four-car width or parallel highways are absolutely necessary to reduce the insufferable congestion between our large cities.

Our experience with truck drivers as a whole, however, is that they are the least selfish on the road. Driving is their day's work. Any delay means longer hours, late supper and less time in the comfort of their homes and families. If they were disposed to take advantage of the weight and size of their trucks, the highways would soon be converted into a combination shambles and junkpile.

Coolidge's Health

Calvin Coolidge came out of the White House a stronger man physically than when he entered it.

The news from Northampton tells that his health is still fine and firm, a fact that will please both his friends and the country as a whole.

But good health is not entirely a gift to him. He has had to cultivate and nourish it.

He was a rose fever sufferer. Yet he pretty fully eliminated that by accepting inoculation of the anti-fever serum and by rigid diet.

Men and women crave the foods most harmful to them. An acid stomach bids for more acids and condiments. Corpulence asks for fat-making sweetstuffs.

Man can eat and grow thin or he can eat and grow fat, whichever is best suited for him. It is a case of selection. It is also a manifestation of character.

Calvin Coolidge realizes that good health is important. He eats what is essential. He rests when necessary. He avoids fretfulness. Whether people like his politics or not, they can take a leaf from his health book with advantage to themselves.

Faith in New England

Read these notes when you get home tonight. They will help you screw up your courage and you can begin tomorrow's work with a fresh burst of confidence.

New England farm real estate values withstood the agricultural depression better than any other section of the country and are 20 points in excess of the index value of the country as a whole.

New England banks show a 22 per cent increase in resources the past five years. Savings deposits increased 20 per cent in that time.

New England waterborne commerce is up 27 per cent since 1925. And we have only begun.

New England power companies have spent $350,000,000 for expansion in that period.

It was a bad year for many, 1930. Yet Massachusetts' manufactories increased their plant and equipment facilities 3.2 per cent.

Have faith in New England.

JOHN HAYS HAMMOND is quite right when he says that more boys' clubs would be a curb on the crime wave, but more policemen's clubs would also help a whole lot.
